MANSFIELD TELLS OF THREATS BY 'TOODLES' FOLLOWED BY RAID

MISS RYAN IN TEARS AT DEATH OF PET 'INN' DOG

Harry K. Mansfield, owner of the Ferncroft Inn, testifying today in the trial of Miss Elizabeth M. Ryan's $50,000 heart balm suit against him, declared that she had on one occasion made threats against him, and that three weeks later the inn had been raided by the Watch and Ward Society of Boston.

Mansfield said Miss Ryan had told him: "I've got you on gambling." He stated that after the raid he said to her: "Part of your threat has come true. I am having trouble now with the Watch and Ward Society."

Mansfield declared he had told Miss Ryan to leave the inn, and that after she left he found these things were "gone": His large traveling case, worth $60; his dress suit case; pair of "Inn" blankets; a "lot" of bric-a-brac; a set of valuable platinum and diamond dress shirt buttons and studs.

He accused Miss Ryan of having "taken his dog too." It developed that this dog died yesterday, and at mention of this fact Miss Ryan left the courtroom with her handkerchief to her eyes.

Court opened at 10 a. m. Less than a dozen women were in the courtroom, which was filled. There was the usual throng in the corridors.

Mansfield was examined by his counsel, Michael Sullivan.

Governor Walsh announced today, in his special message to the Legislature, that the trustees of the Boston and Maine will shortly request legislation to rehabilitate the railroad.

The Governor requests the Legislature to give the recommendations immediate and careful attention. The message reads:

In my address to the General Court on January 7 I called your attention to the pressing need of legislation to enable the Boston & Maine Railroad to readjust its relations with subsidiary lines leased and operated by it, and thereby to relieve its shareholders from an intolerable situation and avert a disintegration of the system harmful alike to the public and to the leased companies.

The trustees of the railroad will shortly present to you a request for such enabling legislation as they consider desirable and practicable, and I urge upon you the importance of giving to their recommendations your immediate and careful attention.

The message was read in the House and referred to the Committee on Railroads.

CARDINAL O'CONNELL DRAWS LESSON FROM CUSTOM HOUSE TOWER

Man's feet rest upon the sands of earth, but his soul, like the pinnacle of this noble tower, is striving ever to peer beyond the clouds of doubt into the perfect serenity of heaven by faith and hope. Thus this living monument teaches the sublime lesson of all mortal life.—From Cardinal O'Connell's address at the dedication of new Custom House at Boston.

DACIA TO SAIL BEFORE NIGHT

GALVESTON, Tex., Jan. 22.—The Dacia is ready to sail, and her commander is waiting only for final orders from the vessel's owner, Edward N. Breitung. It is believed she will get away before night.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Great Britain's final notice that the steamship Dacia will be seized when she sails for Holland with her cargo of cotton concluded the final chapter in the negotiations undertaken to secure her immunity from capture, in the opinion of administration officials here today. The efforts of the United States now will be directed toward compiling proof that the transfer of ownership of the Dacia was made through a bona fide sale, for presentation to the prize court that will pass upon the case.

U. S. AROUSED OVER GREENBRIER INSULT BY BRITISH NAVY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The deep undercurrent of opinion at the State and Navy Departments is that the case of the American vessel Greenbrier, whose flag is reported to have been hauled down by officers of a British warship, is the most serious that has arisen between the United States and Great Britain in the present war.

In the Navy Department the position held tenaciously is that the British cruiser performed an absolutely unwarranted act.

If the account is correct, then officers say Great Britain must offer redress by apology, which will, of course, include a disavowal of the acts of the cruiser's commander.

All authorities agree that if Great Britain should defend the lowering of the American flag under the circumstances a portentious issue will have arisen between the two governments.

Women Injured in Skidding Auto

Two women and two men were painfully bruised and shaken up early today when the rear tire of a touring car in which they were riding exploded, causing the machine to skid against the curbing at Massachusetts avenue and Hollis street, North Cambridge.

One of the women, who gave the name of Jane Long of No. 24 Langdon street, Roxbury, was taken to the office of Dr. E. J. O'Rourke on Massachusetts avenue, but afterward went to her home. The two men, who gave the names of William F. Rush of Williams street and James Loring of Eustis street, Roxbury, were not seriously injured. The second woman disappeared before her identity could be learned.

Deny All Canadians Now at the Front

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Official denial was made by the government press bureau today of reports that all the Canadian troops had gone to the front. It stated that only a small portion had been sent to the continent, the remainder still being at Salisbury.

NEW CUSTOM HOUSE TOWER IS DEDICATED

The new United States Custom House in Boston was dedicated today with ceremonies impressively appropriate to a structure which is the tallest, not only in Boston, but also in New England.

It is styled the "new" Custom House, but it is actually the old Custom House on State street remodelled, with the addition of a majestic tower, which rises to the height of 496 feet.

This is an architectural license hitherto unheard of in Boston, whose regular sky-line limit is about one-fourth of that distance.

The dedication exercises took place in the auditor's room, a large apartment on the ground floor of the building. After the exercises the tower was opened to inspection of guests.

NOTED SPEAKERS.

Among the speakers and other invited guests were: Cardinal O'Connell, Bishop Lawrence, Governor Walsh, Mayor Curley, Assistant Secretaries of the Treasury Andrew J. Peters and Byron J. Newton, Collector Billings, former Collectors Winslow Warren, George H. Lyman and Edwin U. Curtis and the original joint committee from the old Chamber of Commerce, the Boston Merchants' Association and the Board of Trade, which was so influential in securing the new edifice. This committee included Jerome Jones, Elwyn G. Preston, Robert E. Peabody, Wallace L. Pierce and Andrew Webster.

Edwin C. Lewis, the electrical engineer who did all the electrical work on the new structure, was one of the most interested participants.

The dedication exercises were under the auspices of the new Boston Chamber of Commerce, of which Elmer J. Hiles is president. The occasion was fraught with interest for business men, particularly shippers, importers and others having to do with customs matters.

Cardinal O'Connell found an inspiring lesson for humanity in the noble tower, which reaches toward the Heavens. The Cardinal said:

CARDINAL'S SPEECH.

"I am happy to be able to offer my sincere congratulations to the great architect who, to the honor of the whole Nation, has reared this noble tower, majestic in its strength, noble in its simplicity.

"Art has a language all its own

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 22.—A dispatch from Stockholm reports that the Swedish steamer Orest struck a German mine off Raumo, five members of her crew being drowned.

The new Custom House tower, dedicated today. The tower is 496 feet high, by far the most conspicuous tooth in the saw edge of Boston's sky line.

BOMBARD OSTEND FROM AIRSHIPS

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 22.—News of an aerial attack upon Ostend and Zeebrugge, two Belgian towns now held by the Germans, was received here today.

It was made by British aviators, according to the Ruhr correspondent of the Tyd, who says that one of the aviators was forced to descend at Zeebrugge. He is believed to have been taken prisoner.

According to the advices received by the Tyd, the aviators killed a number of German soldiers at Ostend and damaged the railroad station and ammunition depots in both towns with their bombs.

CARRANZA WINS WAY INTO CAPITAL

EL PASO, Texas, Jan. 22.—Representatives of General Carranza in El Paso were notified early today that General Obregon's troops had defeated Zapata troops in the southern outskirts of Mexico City and were marching into the capital.

According to the Carranzista advices only a small force of Zapatistas opposed General Obregon, the main body of the capital's defenders having fled to the northwest.

Reports that George C. Carothers, agent of the United States State Department in Mexico, had been killed at General Villa's headquarters were emphatically denied by Villaista leaders in Juarez early today.

They stated that Carothers and Villa were on good terms

GERMANS CHECKED IN RUSH TOWARD WARSAW, TURKS ROUTED AGAIN

French in Fierce Conflict With Kaiser's Troops Near the Rhine.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The battle of Flanders has been resumed.

After a lull caused by recent heavy storms the Germans are violently bombarding Nieuport while the allies have sent their infantry into action and have made some progress to the east of the Lombartzyde highway.

This is officially announced in a communique issued by the French War Office this afternoon. French artillery still maintains its advantage over that of the Germans between Ypres and the Oise.

Near Berry-au-Bac, on the Aisne, the French have recaptured a trench that they were compelled to evacuate because of a violent bombardment by the Germans.

The situation at the outskirts of Soissons is unchanged, according to the communique.

The communique tells for the first time of the capture of one hundred and fifty yards of German trenches in the forest of Apremont, but at the same time admits that this gain was later lost because of a heavy bombardment by the Germans.

A slight setback to the French in the forest of La Petre northwest of Pont-a-Mousson is also admitted, the Germans having recaptured portions of the trenches taken by the French on January 20.

The official statement indicates that the Germans have succeeded in bringing their heavy howitzers to the front in the Vosges region, it stating that six heavy projectiles have been thrown upon the town of St. Die.

ADMIT REVERSE.

The German view of the situation in France is summed up in the Berlin official report today which says that French forces operating near St. Mihiel have been driven back into their old positions. The report admits that the Germans abandoned a trench near Berry-au-Bac, but says that a French attack north of Verdun was repulsed. A fierce battle for the possession of Cros-des-Larmes, northwest of Pont-a-Mousson, continues. The French gained a temporary advantage there, but were later driven ack.

Earlier Paris advices told of a two-day battle that was still raging near Sennheim on the eastern edge of the French battle line. Experts here see an apparent attempt by the French to isolate Muthausen instead of attempting an assault on the German stronghold.

"The battle has been waged around Harmannsweiler Kopf, which is between four and five miles north of Sennheim and about sixteen miles west of the Germans' Rhine-line defences.

THREATEN ARRAS LINE.

Amsterdam hears that the Germans are preparing for another attempt to cut through the French lines at Arras in order to sever the lines of communication feeding the French, British and Belgian troops in West Flanders.

The continuous movement of troops to and from the front through central Flanders keeps the roads in extremely bad shape. It is almost impossible to move heavy artillery over the roads and motor trucks bearing supplies have to crawl at a snail's pace owing to the mud which frequently stalls them.

RUSSIANS CHECK FOE.

The German offensive against Warsaw has been checked, according to Petrograd advices today which say:

"Under the heavy bombardment of guns sent from Warsaw German troops have been compelled to abandon many of their trenches along the Bzura and Rawka Rivers. It was announced today that the situation west of Warsaw is highly satisfactory to the Russian general staff."

North of the Vistula, the Russian infantry is pressing on toward Thorn from the town of Skempa, which was captured on Wednesday. Great forces of infantry and artillery have passed the Skraw River despite the obstinate resistance of the Germans and are advancing rapidly behind a heavy screen of cavalry which is moving down the Vistula valley and through the region from the Vistula to Ilpin.

Heavy reinforcements have reached the Germans in the Mlawa region and they have resumed the offensive there apparently with the intention of throwing back the Russians and forcing an abandonment of the campaign against Thorn. A general battle is developing about Mlawa, where the trenches of the opposing forces are at some points less than 100 yards apart.

Early dispatches, including an admission from Petrograd said that the Germans had succeeded in crossing the Vistula from the south.

TURKS DEFEATED AGAIN.

Another Turkish defeat was reported in an official dispatch received at Petrograd from Tiflis today. It stated that Ottoman troops and Kurd tribesmen, advancing from the captured Persian City of Tabriis had been defeated when they attempted to invade the Caucasus and driven back with heavy losses.

The Bourse Gazette's Tiflis correspondent reports that the Turkish forces attempted to cross the Russo-Persian frontier at Djulfa on the Araxes River, but suffered so severely from the Russians' artillery fire that they retired to Marand, several miles south of the river.

The defeat of the Turks at Karaugan has permitted the Russians to strengthen their forces on the Persian frontier.

Another dispatch from Tiflis reports that the Advance of the Russian troops against Erzerum has been temporarily halted because of terrific snowstorms.

ITALIAN CRISIS NEAR.

Geneva dispatches today quote Swiss newspapers to the effect that a crisis is rapidly developing in the relations of Germany and Italy. They state that all German residents of Italy, of whom there are more than 2,000, have been notified by Berlin to leave at once and return to Germany.

While the Swiss papers make no prediction that Italy will immediately enter the side of the allies they intimate that such a step will not be long delayed.

SUEZ THREATENED.

Cairo dispatches state that Turkish troops concentrating on the border of the Sinai Peninsula are beginning their advance on the Suez Canal. Ottoman forces with a contingent of Bedouin tribesmen have reached the Kilkate district, twenty-eight miles east of the canal, and large bodies of Turkish troops are reported at El Arish and El Audje, farther east.

An Amsterdam dispatch quotes a Berlin report of an attack on the German consulate at Canea Sunday by an Italian mob. The imperial arms on the consulate were torn down before the police could interfere.

The Bucharest correspondent of the Times telegraphs that a German contingent in the new army formed to invade Servia is said there to number 80,000 men, well equipped with siege artillery.

REPORT BOMBS DROPPED NEAR THE BIG KRUPP GUN WORKS; HOUSES WRECKED

PARIS, Jan. 22.—An unofficial dispatch from Arnhem, Netherlands, today declares the allies' airmen have dropped bombs in Essen, Germany, in a raid on the famous Krupp gun works, where the big German guns are made.

A Holland report says several aeroplanes were in the raid and that their missiles, instead of falling on the Krupp plant, struck and demolished several houses nearby.

It is believed the British may have made the raid in reprisal for the visit of death-dealing German Zeppelins to Yarmouth and other English towns.

British indignation at the raid on "unfortified towns" may have forced the reprisal, it is believed. Incidentally a German official statement intimates that on the Norfolk coast was itself in contact the British attacks on such open towns as Freiburg, Swakopmund and Dar-es-Salaam.

In fear of reprisals, a Rotterdam Courant correspondent says the Germans have ordered all lights extinguished in Cologne and other large cities. Essen is a city of about 125,000 population in Rhine Province, Prussia. A report December 3 that a British aviator had raided the Krupp works at Essen was officially denied at Berlin.

The latest French official statement denies the German claim of victory at Notre Dame de Loretto, near Arras, but tells of a violent bombardment by the Germans, followed by an attack, which was repulsed.

News comes today that the Germans have turned on the French forces near Metz, in the vicinity of which the Kaiser is massing large forces. The Germans have made gains in this section, regaining a part of the ground lost to the French. A battle is now raging on the Metz front. The Germans are taking the offensive.

In the forest of Le Petre, near Pont-a-Mousson, the Germans by a violent counter attack, according to the French official report, have reoccupied some of the trenches recently taken by the French.

In Champagne, east of Rheims, German field works have been demolished, the Germans forced to evacuate the trenches and a depot of ammunition exploded by the French.

In Alsace the French invasion has penetrated to Hartmanns Weller, fifteen and one-half miles from the Rhine. This town is northwest of Mulhausen.

Jews Flee from Turk Oppression

CAIRO, Jan. 22.—Painful accounts reach here from Palestine of the flight of Jews from the Turkish military regime. Djemal Pasha, commander-in-chief of the army intended for the attack on the Suez Canal, appears to have undertaken a systematic destruction of the entire work of Jewish colonization, built up by the labor of forty years and the expenditure of millions.

A proclamation has been issued ordering the destruction under pain of death of all Zionist documents and papers relating to colonization. In many cases land settled by Jews has been handed over to the Arabs and the land collected by the Jewish committee of gallilee has been confiscated to feed the army.

American Tars Held in Berlin

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Ambassador Gerard at Berlin cabled the State Department that several sailors of the American cotton steamer Greenbrier and Carolyn while ashore in Bremen were arrested by the military authorities, but would be released in time to rejoin their ships. Officials here believe that the men were "out for a lark" when taken.

American Women to Aid the Serbs

PARIS, Jan. 22.—Miss Ellen Lamotte of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore; Miss Annie G. Porter and Miss Margaret Mackay of the Women's Hospital, New York, and Dr. Davidson of Princeton and Hartford, will leave for Servia on Monday to serve in the hospital at Nish.

MERCIER CHARGED BREAKING OF OATH

LONDON, Jan. 22.—A copy of the famous pastoral letter by Cardinal Mercier, the Belgian prelate, which was suppressed by the Germans, has been received here. This document of 4,000 words threatened to bring about a crisis between the Kaiser and the Vatican.

The letter, the full text shows, put the Cardinal on record as unalterably opposed to the surrender of Belgium to the Germans and asserted that those Belgians who died in defence of their country would receive sure salvation.

"Germany broke her oath, therefore we, as Belgians, owe her neither respect, attachment nor obedience," declared one passage in the letter.

Hungarians Move Toward Bukowina

CZAR TO SHIFT THEATRE OF WAR

WARSAW, Jan. 22.—The first stages of the new Russian plan are unfolding, and before a month passes a new theatre of war will hold the world's attention.

The new offensive will develop a character of warfare which will be particularly suited to the composition of the Russian army. It will not be trench fighting.

The plan includes a scheme of cooperation with new elements and on the largest scale.

THINK WARSAW SAFE.

The Russian cavalry is in splendid condition, and the horses are extraordinarily fit. The Cossacks entrained yesterday morning and I have never seen cavalry looking so well after prolonged campaigning.

One general told me that they had just finished sixty-three days of active field work, but the troopers and their horses showed little sign of breaking down. The Turcomans are an aggressive looking lot. Already they have proved themselves.

The country over which the cavalry will operate in their new advance is ideal for the European mounted troops, but the Russian cavalry officers assure me it is just the terrain they like the best. I can give no further hint of where the new war area will be.

Meanwhile the situation around Warsaw is almost normal. The Germans seem to be better themselves like waves against a sea wall. Another violent assault has been made behind Bolimow, but after nearly twenty-four hours of furious fighting there has been no appreciable change in the position of either army.

Nothing better than the second line of defences in front of Warsaw ever has been constructed in field fortifications. The line runs along for eighty miles and consists of six rows of supporting trenches, which are superbly built and occupied by a force amply able to hold it indefinitely.

FRESH ARMIES FORM.

The Warsaw problem no longer holds the attention of the general staff. Whenever the offensive against the German lines, in the opinion of Grand Duke Nicholas and his advisers, is impracticable, they will be held up with a containing force and thus the bulk of the Russian army will be released for other purposes.

On Polish territory the policy has been to engage as many German troops as possible, to immobilize them while bringing up fresh armies from selected regions. While great masses of cavalry are beginning the offensive, fresh armies are forming behind them.

The new plan of campaign contemplates active operation, which will continue at the shortest for six months, probably much longer.

With the whole available German force committed to a certain line, it is reasonable to believe that a change of front will be extremely difficult.

Yankee Crews Must Run American Ships

The following telegram has been received by Collector Billings from E. T. Chamberlain, Commissioner of Navigation: "Warn all American ships for the continent to make certain of good American citizenship of officers and whole crews."

Spain Holds Ship Because of Dewey

MADRID, Jan. 22.—Spain has decided not to send the battleship Espana to the opening of the Panama Canal because Admiral Dewey, who sank the Spanish fleet at Manila, will be present.

German Submarines Leave Helgoland

LONDON, Jan. 22.—A Daily Mail Copenhagen dispatch says: "The German destroyers and submarines left Helgoland roads Wednesday, and news from many sources in Germany points to the fleet becoming more active."

OCEAN ZEPPELINS ARE AIR VIKINGS

LONDON, Jan. 22.—German official reports from Berlin state that the German air fleet that bombarded English towns Tuesday night and returned in safety to their base was composed of several specially constructed Zeppelins. German officials add that this was only a trial expedition for the airships and that they fulfilled all expectations.

When the airships, known as "Ocean Zeppelins," left their station in Germany, all were manned by a full complement of officers and men and equipped with comparatively heavy guns, together with the largest possible supply of ammunition.

The airships crossed the North Sea with great speed and at high altitude, and were not discovered until after they had reached England.

The German military experts declare that this dash over British towns has demonstrated the practicability of an attack by a great aerial squadron. As a result of their exploit, the Zeppelins are now known in Berlin as "Air vikings."

New Zeppelin raids against England are being planned, according to the unanimous opinion of the German press, which today devotes much space to the recent Zeppelin raid over Yarmouth and other Norfolk coast towns.

A German correspondent declares the plans of this raid were known in advance to certain quarters in Switzerland and that a warning was given to the British authorities, who are reported to have stated they placed little credence in it.

The German official report says the Zeppelins were first fired on from the towns outside of Yarmouth on which they dropped bombs, adding: "England has no right to be indignant, as her flying machines and ships in broad daylight have attacked open towns, such as Freiburg, Dar-es-Salam and Swakopmund.

O'MEARA ADMITS BUT SINGLE 'BOSS'

"You are the only man who is my boss in Massachusetts."

Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara made that declaration to E. Gerry Brown, formerly Supervisor of Small Loan Agencies, according to a statement at the State House by Mr. Brown to the Legislative Committee on Rules.

O'Meara's declaration was made, Mr. Brown said, during a discussion relative to the police authority of the Supervisor of Small Loan Agencies.

During the hearing on Mr. Brown's petition for a legislative investigation of his removal from office, he said it was generally admitted he was equipped with sufficient authority to require action by the police when he so desired.

The police power which Mr. Brown asserted is vested in the Supervisor of Small Loan Agencies is prescribed as follows in Section 3 of Chapter 727 of the Acts of 1911:

"It shall be the duty of the district police and of the police of the cities and towns to carry out the directions of the supervisor in enforcing the provisions of this act, and of any regulations made hereunder by him."

O'MEARA'S ATTITUDE.

By Mr. O'Meara's declaration he subscribes to that authority and to that alone. No allegiance is professed to the Mayor and Council of Boston or to the city which pays his salary.

Mr. O'Meara's statement fails to subordinate himself to the Governor of the Commonwealth, by whom he is appointed.

But the act which created the office of the Police Commissioner of Boston, which Mr. O'Meara occupies, places him in a very definite position of subordination. That act provides as follows:

"Said Police Commissioner may be removed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Council, for such cause as he shall deem sufficient."

Governor Walsh has frequently said to the Legislature that the duty of appointing a commissioner for the police department of the city of Boston should not be confined to the State House.

Mr. Brown was advised that the Legislative Committee would like to have him appear again on Monday, to conclude his testimony. It was fairly evident he had won a majority of the committee for an investigation.

"I have yet to hear the text of the charges. I have yet to stand face to face with those who accuse he," said Brown.

"Was I removed because I reached into the banking houses which had connection with the loan sharks? Was I removed because I reached into a trust company and compelled the surrender of a note?

"IN WORLD OF GRAFT."

"Was I removed because in the centre of the easiest graft in the country I was so much of a knave or fool I refused to profit by my opportunities?

"Was I removed because it was desired to make this office a graft adjunct of some man or party?

"The Governor in his place was the prosecutor. He said: 'Shall we drop this here or shall I send it to the district attorney?'

"Governor,' I said, 'do you think that I, a sworn of ce holder, would suborn a crime? Take it to the district attorney if you wish.'

"And did they?" chewed President Coolidge, who was sitting at the head table.

"I have not been summonsed yet," said Brown.

"Graft—it was a world of graft in which I moved. It was a world of boring, tempting workers anxious to have me make the first misstep and then to profit. I was advised to treat the lenders as something a little less than human beings in order to protect myself. In my own office I installed a double phone, so that even in the conventions I could always have a witness to all that was said."

Telephone Topics Subject of E. K. Hall

An address on "Some Mistaken Impressions About Our Company," was delivered by E. K. Hall, vice-president of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company at the banquet of the Boston Plant Chapter of the Telephone and Telegraph Society of New England, in Copley Hall. Several prominent officials of the telephone company were present as guests.

HOGANS TO KEEP UP NAME FIGHT

The Hogans will keep up the fight for new names.

"No money will stand in the way. There is too much English in me to give up so easily," was Mrs. Hogan's declaration when seen after Judge George's decision that the Hogans could not change their names was given in the Probate Court.

"The hearing was a great ordeal for us to go through," she continued, "as none of us has ever been in court before. There were many other incidents we could have mentioned while on the witness stand, but, as others would have been involved, we left them out.

"The name Hogan is always provoking an embarrassment to us and, instead of the unpleasantness growing less, it increases.

"Only recently while on a vacation at our country home in New Hampshire I was questioned about my religion by a stranger, who was a Catholic. It was most unpleasant to be identified with St. Cecilia's parish in the Back Bay just because I happened to be named Hogan.

"Understand, I have no animosity against the Catholics or against the Irish, but, as I said on the stand, and as every member of my family testified, it is misleading and keeps us continually explaining.

"We certainly shall not give up now that we have begun to fight. Some change we must have, and no money shall stand in the way of our taking a name that shall stamp us for what we are."

"Do you not think it would be well for you and your children to make the name of Hogan stand for all you would like a new name to indicate?" she was asked.

Mrs. Hogan was decided in her answer:

"It would be all right if we were Irish and Catholic, but with us it is different, and if my son were to have an opportunity of becoming the mayor of Boston by holding the name Hogan, I should prefer he were a private citizen with another name."

Attorney S. A. G. Cox, in whose office Mrs. Hogan and her family assembled after the court decision, intimated there would be an appeal to higher courts.

REQUESTED MISS RYAN TO LEAVE INN, SAYS MANSFIELD

Tells of Threats by "Toodles" Following Raid at the Inn.

you had the talk with Miss Ryan you had another with her about the car seller, didn't you? A.—I did.

Q.—About how long? A.—About an hour.

Q.—What did you say? A.—I remember asking her who it was that told her about the car. I told her that there was only one waiter allowed to answer her call; that he was instructed to serve her and that no other was to go to her room, and that under no pretext was any one else to come in answer to her call.

QUARREL OVER AUTO.

Q.—What did Miss Ryan say to this? A.—Nothing.

Q.—Was the nurse there? A.—Yes.

Q.—The nurse's name is Miss Griffin, isn't it A.—Yes.

Q.—What did you say to the nurse? A.—I asked the nurse the name of the waiter, and she asked me the name, and I told her "John Rafferty."

Q.—Now, after that talk with Miss Griffin, did you have another talk with Miss Ryan about the car? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did you say? A.—Well, we talked so much about it; it was nearly every day we talked.

Q.—Did you have any quarrel over it? A.—We had a few quarrels.

Q.—How many times did you talk about the car? A.—Oh, we talked about it six or eight times.

Q.—Can you give in substance what Miss Ryan said when you asked her who it was who gave her the information about the car? A.—I told her the car would not come back until she told me who it was that told her what I said to the car seller. I asked her to tell me now who it was that invaded my apartments and put her in such a hysterical state over the car.

Q.—Did she answer? A.—She made no answer.

Q.—What other information did she give you about the car? A.—The only information I got from her was that two women came to her room.

Q.—Did she give you their names? A.—She refused to give me their names.

Q.—Now at any time about the talk you had with her on what you said to the salesman about the car, was anything said by Miss Ryan about her departure from Pemcroft Inn. Was it discussed in any way? A.—I think I would put the time of that discussion about three or four weeks after the car was sent away.

Q.—Was anybody present? A.—The nurse was present.

Q.—What was said by Miss Ryan and by you? A.—It was between 11 and 12 o'clock at night. I was on my way to my room and I stopped at Miss Ryan's room to have a talk with her, possibly on the topics of the day. I sat in her room and talked it a general way for five minutes, and then I ventured to say:

"Aren't you about ready to tell me who it was that came upstairs to tell you about the car?" I said: "I'm going to know at any cost." She said: "You'll never know from me who it was." And I said, "I will try and find out."

We kept on talking for a while and then I said: "I'm going to have you stay here and will have everything done that I can for you. When you are well, I want you to go away from here." She said she would be glad to go.

Q.—Where was Miss Griffin with reference to the room? A.—She was sitting on a couch. The head of which was at Miss Ryan's room door. Miss Griffin was perhaps on the couch was about six or eight feet from where I was, while talking to Miss Ryan.

Q.—Was that the first talk that you had with Miss Ryan with reference to her going away? A.—That was the first talk.

Q.—What did she say at any time? A.—She said many times "I'm going to New York."

Q.—Did she later? A.—Oh, she packed up her goods once or twice and then didn't go.

DENIES PROMISE OF MONEY.

Q.—Had you any talk about bargaining away in which you said you would give her money, and was Miss Griffin present when you said this? A.—Never.

Q.—Now, did you say during your conversation with Miss Ryan that you would give her one-half of your money? A.—I did not.

Q.—Was there anything in that conversation in reference to any game or games? A.—Nothing in any way, shape or manner.

Q.—Was she sitting up at any time during the day while convalescing? A.—She was in a chair part of the day.

Q.—Some time later did you have any talk with her in reference to her going away? A.—We had many.

Q.—Where did you have this talk? A.—Somewhere in the apartment.

Q.—Was the door open when you talked with her? A.—Always open as far as I knew.

Q.—Do you remember any special conversation about her going away and when? A.—It was after that affair.

Q.—Well tell us? A.—Any one I think of?

Q.—Any one. A.—I remember one morning after breakfast that Miss Ryan said: "Well, I've got you in any and every way you turn. I've got you on gambling. I've got you on white slavery. You took me to New York; I've got you on New York. You took me to Europe, and I've got you on Europe." There were also other references.

Mansfield testified that Pemcroft Inn was raided the last of August. It was on a Friday, but he could not remember the exact date. He said that about three weeks before the raid he had a talk with Miss Ryan about "having you on gambling." He said about the time of the raiding she did a great deal of automobile riding, being out till 7 o'clock and sometimes as late as 11 o'clock at night. He said that on the day of the raid Miss Ryan spoke of marriage also appeared. The next morning he did not speak to her.

NEVER SPOKE OF MARRIAGE.

Q.—On the day of the raid did she ask you to keep a promise of marriage? A.—No.

Q.—Did Miss Ryan ever ask you regarding a promise of marriage? A.—She never spoke of marriage in any way, shape or manner.

Mansfield testified that after the raid they did not see much of each other because they quarrelled so much and that he got into the habit of getting his breakfast alone.

Q.—Any quarrel about refusal to marry? A.—No, at all.

Mansfield said that after the Watch and Ward Society had been to Pemcroft Inn he said to Miss Ryan: "Part of your threat has come true. I am having trouble now with the Watch and Ward Society."

"She said she knew nothing about the raid" added Mansfield. "I asked her how long she was going to stay there and she answered that she would go when she got good and ready."

Mansfield said he was not making Miss Ryan an allowance at that time. He testified:

"On the Sunday after the raid I had quite a talk with Miss Ryan in the piazza room. I said: 'Won't you probably go away this week?' She said, 'No.' I said: 'I'm having all the trouble I want with this gambling case. You're not satisfied here, and I am not satisfied to have you here. If you will go I will give you all the furniture in the apartment in Boston, $500 in money, the carpet and'—that was all."

Q.—Previous to that time, had you a talk about an agreement. A.—She said several times that she would not go until she got a big bunch of money.

IDENTIFIES AGREEMENT.

Attorney Sullivan passed Mansfield a paper. He asked the witness if it was the agreement he had drawn up. Mansfield said it was, and was told to read it. Mansfield read:

"I promise to send Elizabeth M. Ryan"

"Read it to yourself and tell me if it is the agreement," interrupted Attorney Sullivan.

Mansfield testified that he wrote it on the second Sunday after the Watch and Ward Society had visited Pemcroft Inn.

Mansfield testified: "She said she wanted a big bunch of money and I wrote this. I read it to her. She said she was not satisfied with anything but a big bunch of money. I tore it up and threw it in the waste basket."

Mansfield said that on the following Saturday she told him that she would go away on the following Sunday.

Q.—What did she say? A.—Will you give me my $500.

Q.—What did you say? A.—I said yes. I told her if she would take what I wanted to give and would go away I'd have the furniture sent to Boston pack and ship the furniture. I asked her where she was going abroad, and I bought several hundreds of dollars' worth of hats in Paris; one sealskin coat and one other. Those were the most expensive. In Siegel's in Boston a paid $700 at one time for things that she bought. I sent a large number of checks to a manufacturer in New York. It was about $400 or $500, several times I sent checks. They would go on her account with it. H. White in 1903 which I did not pay for some time after. It was either $125 or $150.

Q.—At some time previous to the drawing of the will did you talk about it to Miss Ryan? A.—I had some talk.

DRAWING UP THE WILL.

Q.—When was it? A.—Probably the later part of 1910.

Q.—What did she say? A.—If I remember, I think she said if anything happened to me she wouldn't have a single thing.

Q.—Now, did you have any further talk with Miss Ryan in reference to the will? A.—Not as I remember.

Q.—Were you living in Boston at that time? A.—I think I was at Pemcroft Inn at the time.

Q.—Do you remember the exact time of the date of the will? A.—I couldn't say as to the exact time. I think it was inside the first of January.

Q.—Where is that will now? A.—Destroyed.

Q.—Who destroyed it? A.—I did.

Q.—Now, on the making of the will, what did you do with it? A.—I left it at the Old Colony Trust Company. It was signed and I got a copy of it.

"Read it to yourself and tell me if it is the agreement," interrupted Attorney Sullivan.

Mansfield testified that he wrote it on the second Sunday after the Watch and Ward Society had visited Pemcroft Inn.

Mansfield testified: "She said she wanted a big bunch of money and I wrote this. I read it to her. She said she was not satisfied with anything but a big bunch of money. I tore it up and threw it in the waste basket."

Mansfield said that on the following Saturday she told him that she would go away on the following Sunday.

Q.—What did she say? A.—Will you give me my $500.

Q.—What did you say? A.—I said yes. I told her if she would take what I wanted to give and would go away I'd have the furniture sent to Boston pack and ship the furniture. I asked her where she was going abroad, and I bought several hundreds of dollars' worth of hats in Paris; one sealskin coat and one other. Those were the most expensive. In Siegel's in Boston a paid $700 at one time for things that she bought. I sent a large number of checks to a manufacturer in New York. It was about $400 or $500, several times I sent checks. They would go on her account with it. H. White in 1903 which I did not pay for some time after. It was either $125 or $150.

DRAWING UP THE WILL.

Q.—When was it? A.—Probably the later part of 1910.

Q.—What did she say? A.—If I remember, I think she said if anything happened to me she wouldn't have a single thing.

Q.—Now, did you have any further talk with Miss Ryan in reference to the will? A.—Not as I remember.

Q.—Were you living in Boston at that time? A.—I think I was at Pemcroft Inn at the time.

Q.—Do you remember the exact time of the date of the will? A.—I couldn't say as to the exact time. I think it was inside the first of January.

Q.—Where is that will now? A.—Destroyed.

Q.—Who destroyed it? A.—I did.

Q.—Now, on the making of the will, what did you do with it? A.—I left it at the Old Colony Trust Company. It was signed and I got a copy of it.

Attorney Sullivan passed Mansfield a paper. He asked the witness if it was the agreement he had drawn up. Mansfield said it was, and was told to read it. Mansfield read:

"I promise to send Elizabeth M. Ryan"

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, the bowels and the liver with Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are the successful substitute for calomel—there's never any sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with "a dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result.

Take one or two nightly for a week and see how much better you feel and look. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

CURLEY HITS AT STARVATION WAGE

"Just so long as we permit the capitalists, anarchists, Industrial Workers of the World and Socialists to provide panaceas for national evils. Just so long will economic problems cry aloud for solution," declared Mayor Curley at the dinner of the associate members of the Ninth Regiment at the Copley-Plaza.

"In a nation founded on the ideal of equality of opportunity, human rights should continue paramount to dividends made possible by inhuman, questionable and wanton methods.

"Just so long as dividends are regulated by starvation wages with their toll of dead babies through lack of nutrition, with their toll of young manhood and womanhood sent to an early grave through tuberculosis or kindred maladies, just so long will there be an excuse for the existence of the anarchist, the Industrial Worker of the World and the Socialist.

"The absence on the statute books of the various Commonwealths of this country of a law to regulate the hours of labor for men, women and children, the absence of a national minimum wage law, the failure to provide a merchant marine, the presence of racial and religious hatred, the absence of Federal legislation to safeguard the home life of America through a national law to prohibit or regulate divorce, are all worthy of our best thought and effort."

Percival Easy Winner.

In the twenty-fourth game of the B class amateur billiard tournament at the Elite, Percival defeated Barry, 500 to 36.

DOESN'T KNOW IF SHE'S WED OR NOT

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—"I am Mrs Morosini and I can't say whether I'm Mr Werner's wife or not."

This was the declaration of Mrs. Giulia Morosini Werner, wife of Arthur M. Werner, former policeman, when she was examined before trial in an action brought against her by Werner to recover $250,000 damages.

He alleges she confiscated various valuable pictures and papers that belonged to him after his exclusion from the Morosini estate at Riverdale.

Mrs. Werner said she excluded her husband from the estate April 1, 1915, and has since used him for annulment of their marriage, asserting he was not legally divorced from Alice Redding Werner, his first wife, when he married his second wife. The annulment action has not yet been tried.

Owes Her Life to This Lung Medicine

Sufferers from Consumption should take the trouble to investigate what Eckman's Alterative has accomplished in restoring others to health. Read this:

Griffith, Lake Co., Ind.

"Gentlemen:—About Sept. 10th, 1908, my mother-in-law was taken sick with Catarrhal Pneumonia, which developed into Tuberculosis. In January, when Rev. Wm. Berg of St. Michael's Church at Schererville, Ind., prepared her for death, he recommended that I get Eckman's Alterative and see if it would not give her some relief. The attending physician declared she had Consumption and was beyond all medical aid. Practically without hope for recovery, I insisted that she try the Alterative, which she did. I am glad to say that she soon began to improve. Now she weighs as hard as ever, weighs twenty pounds heavier than she ever did before she took sick, and is in good health." (Abbreviated.)

(Signed) MRS. GRIMES.

Eckman's Alterative is most efficacious in bronchial affections and coughs, and in allaying abnormal and upbuilding the system. Contains no harmful or habit forming drugs. Accept no substitutes. Small size, $1; regular size, $2. Sold by leading druggists. Write for booklet of wonders.

LIVE NINE DAYS IN QUAKE RUINS

ROME, Jan. 22.—The members of an entire family that had been imprisoned under the ruins of their home for nine days were taken out alive at Pescina today. They owed their lives to the fact that they had been penned in an excavation under their home, where they at least were able to move about to some extent. They were suffering from thirst and hunger and four were unconscious.

Train Is Held Up Forty-five Minutes by New Baby Girl

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—A baby girl held up a Brooklyn Rapid Transit train for forty-five minutes today. She is the daughter of Mrs. Anne Schulnoff who was a passenger on the train. It was all in the "rush" hour and mother and child are now doing nicely in a hospital.

DEDICATE NEW CUSTOM HOUSE

which, clearer than any words, speaks straight to the human heart. And this wondrous power of speech architecture more than any other art has always possessed. And it was most natural that in the Church of Christ, who spoke in parables, this language was from the beginning employed to turn the hearts of men from the cares and the strife of earth to the consideration of their high destiny.

"The cathedrals of old Europe are so many books filled with all the imagery and symbolism which taught men the peace and beauty of the Kingdom of God.

"And this tower, though no sacred shrine, still, through its stones and dumb, teaches to all who behold it a noble lesson, not merely of strength and beauty but of perennial faith and hope.

"Like a huge giant it stands secure, poised upon the broad and strong shoulders of the old Custom House. And from that base it lifts its majestic height, stone upon stone until it reaches its lofty eminence.

"NOBLE MESSAGE."

"It does not spurn the ancient landmark at its feet, but rests upon it with perfect security and confidence. Then rising sublimely above it, it points its pinnacle straight up into the firmament, where God abides. Raised high above the noise and turmoil of the city streets, it thus speaks its noble message.

"On the strong foundations of a solid experience build all your high hopes of new achievement. What is ancient must aid what is modern. They stand not apart, but each must aid theother—the old by the strength of its foundations, the new by the boldness of its hopes and aspirations.

"Man lives on earth, but every kind thought and noble deed builds higher and higher the soul of his vision and his power.

"Man's feet rest upon the sands of earth, but his soul, like the pinnacle of this noble tower, is striving ever to peer beyond the clouds of doubt into the perfect serenity of Heaven by faith and hope. Thus this living monument teaches the sublime lesson of all mortal life."

Formerly the State House dome was the most conspicuous feature of the city landscape from the harbor, but now the Custom House dome takes the front. It is the only skyscraper in Boston.

The building low in force will not permit roofs more than 125 feet above ground.

Flanking the tower, which cost, with other improvement, $1,800,000, are wings which are remodelled portions of the old Custom House, which was built in 1847. Peabody & Stearns were the architects of the new structure.

After the dedication those having part in it and guests were served luncheon at the Exchange Club. After that they ascended the tower, which has one of the largest clocks in existence, and enjoyed the wonderful view of Boston, the harbor and suburbs commanded from the lofty altitude of its apex.

Standard Magnate's Wife Silent Giver of Many Funds for Philanthropy.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, wife of the founder of the Standard Oil Company, is seriously ill at her imposing home at Pocantico. She is afflicted with malignant anemia.

Mrs. Rockefeller, who is seventy-five years old, has been in declining health for several years. She was deeply grieved by the attacks made upon her husband's business methods, and when the United States Supreme Court decreed the dissolution of the great Standard Oil combine into subsidiary corporations she began to show signs of a breakdown.

Few women in the world have been more charitable than she, but her giving was so unostentatious that for many years the public had no idea of her bounties. She was the patroness of innumerable private charities. They were managed by her sister, Miss Spelman.

The fact that she is ill was learned through the Rockefeller offices at No. 26 Broadway.

PERKINS RECITES LABOR BENEFITS

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—That the United States Steel Corporation has paid out $2,564,000 to workmen injured in its mills or to families of those killed while in its employ was testified today by George W. Perkins, formerly of J. P. Morgan & Co., before the Federal commission on industrial relations.

"There were 2,092 men on our pension list at the end of 1912," said Mr. Perkins, "and the annual outlay is $422,000."

The witness said that the total wages paid out by the Steel Corporation was $267,000,000. This averaged $2.85 for all workers except the executives. Mr. Perkins admitted 22.5 of the men work twelve hours a day, but said that they do not labor continuously, resting every thirty minutes. In 1913, said the witness, the corporation paid out $660,000 for safety appliances.

Mr. Perkins advocated national control, through a federal charter, of corporations operating in more than one State.

"The profit-sharing plan is the missing link between labor and capital," said the witness. "Profit sharing would go far to abolish industrial unrest."

Mr. Perkins defended combinations of capital, but gave his opinion that labor should organize for its own protection.

"Labor should organize in keeping with all the laws," said he, "and business should organize in such a way that it cannot be made the target of legislation. The weak spots in labor unions is the same as in business itself, namely, a disregard of the rights of others. Conditions are bad now because of the war, but when the war is over conditions will be worse unless the tariff is changed. If we can get the tariff out of politics we will be able to bring about conditions that will result in a solution of the non-employment question. In my opinion Germany has solved the unemployment problem. "There has been a feeling among employers that the government has been unfair ever since the Sherman law was enacted."

THAW TO PASS THROUGH BOSTON

Harry K. Thaw will pass through Boston tomorrow afternoon on his way to New York in custody of William Travers Jerome, according to plans announced in Manchester, N. H.

Thaw has hired a body guard to watch those who will watch him during the journey.

Jerome expects to take the 2.25 p. m. train from Concord, N. H., on Saturday and cross Boston to the South Station to take the 5 o'clock limited for New York. Thaw expects to obtain bail in $5,000 immediately on reaching New York.

At a conference in Manchester between Clerk Burns P. Hodgman of the United District Court and Attorney Bernard Jacobs, representing Mr. Jerome, it was agreed that Thaw be brought before Judge Edgar Aldrich at Concord tomorrow at 11 a. m.

Special Attorney General Jerome and Sheriff Harry Hornbeck will arrive from New York tonight. The mandate of the United States Supreme Court ordering Thaw's extradition was reached by Deputy Attorney General Franklin Kennedy at Albany and has been turned over to Jerome.

Attorney Jacobs and Clerk Hodgman agreed on the hour for the proceeding after Jerome's Manchester representative had first talked with Attorney Merrill Shurtleff of Thaw's New Hampshire staff of attorneys. Clerk Hodgman then notified Sheriff Holman F. Drew, Thaw's guard, to have him in court tomorrow morning.

Details as to bail have been arranged in New York in Thaw's behalf by Attorney John R. Stanchfield, who has been engaged to assist Philander C. Knox in defending Thaw.

MOTHER TO MAKE TRIP.

Thaw spent a busy day receiving callers and clearing up his affairs. The Clement mansion today resembled a baggage room, so numerous were the trunks and bags that have been packed, from those of Thaw to the cook's. Thaw's mother will go to New York, accompanied by his secretary, Harry J. Rice.

The first official to arrive in Manchester from New York was Norman Fitzsimmons, formerly attached to the district attorney's office in New York, but now a private detective. Fitzsimmons has been engaged by Thaw to note happenings on the trip to New York.

Attorney Shurtleff said today:

"I don't see why Messrs. Jerome and Kennedy are coming unless for display. It is not necessary to have counsel in court for such a proceeding."

Thaw slaps Jerome hard in the circulars that are being spread broadcast in the effort to swing public sentiment his way. In a column devoted to Thaw's mental status the following appears:

RECAPITULATION.

1908 { Sane for Grand Jury. Insane for frame-up. Sane after Thaw defeated frame-up.
1907 { Insane during trial. Sane after trial.
1908 { Very sane until trial. Insane during trial. Incurably insane after acquittal.
1909 { Very insane.
1912 { Insane.
1913 { Sane for indictment. Insane for United States Commission.
1914 { Sane for extradition (after commission reports Thaw sane).
Both ways for United States Supreme Court.

Shoes Are Contraband of War

OUR export business with 39 foreign countries has been practically cut off on account of the European War. Cancellations of our foreign shipments have left us with a stock on hand at our Factories, to be disposed of at once.

These shoes have been distributed among a few of our stores. We have added sample shoes, window shoes slightly faded, short lines of broken sizes, and discontinued styles for Men and Women. We have also included a few odd lots that we have made up in our factories at odd times, using materials that didn't measure up to the rigid factory inspection of Standard Regal Shoes.

This assortment of $4.00 and $5.00 Regal Shoes represents unusual values at $2.95 and cannot be compared with the ordinary mark-down, inventory and clearance sale shoes sold at this season of the year. The shoes that have been marked down have the original prices stamped on the sole in our factories.

CUT THIS OUT

OLD ENGLISH RECIPE FOR CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES.

If you know someone who is troubled with catarrhal deafness or head noises, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. Experiments conducted in England some time ago seem to prove conclusively that catarrhal deafness, head noises, etc., were directly caused by constitutional trouble. It was further brought out that olives, sprays, inhalers, etc., merely temporize with the symptoms and seldom, if ever, effect a permanent cure. This being so much time and money were spent in perfecting a scientific, yet effective tonic that would quickly dispel all traces of the catarrhal poison from the system. The prescription which was eventually formulated and which has aroused the belief that catarrhal deafness and head noises will soon be extinct is given below in understandable form so that anyone can treat themselves in their own home at little expense.

Secure from any druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength). Take 4 drops four times daily after meals in a little water, sweetened if desired. Within a few days the ringing in the ears will disappear, hearing will improve and in many cases perfect hearing will be restored. Even if only relief is obtained, you can readily see that a few cents worth of Parmint will do the work of dollars spent in other ways. Parmint is used in this way not only to relieve by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian tubes, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear.

Every person who has catarrh in any form should give this method a trial and free themselves from this destructive disease.

Important.—In ordering Parmint always specify that you want Double Strength. Your druggist has it, or he can easily get it for you. If not, write to the International Laboratories, Kingston, N. Y., who make a specialty of it.—Advertisement.

FIRE CHIEFS RAP $5 BADGE PRICE

The Massachusetts Fire Chiefs' Club—composed of fire department heads in Bay State cities and towns—has rung a general alarm in its tiff with Fire Commissioner Grady of Boston. The chiefs are all-fired angry over the demand that they pay $5 each for 1915 Boston Fire Department badges. Heretofore these badges have been gifts to the chiefs.

Today Chief William E. Cade of Wakefield, president of the club, said:

"The Massachusetts fire chiefs will not ante $5 apiece for these badges." And he continued:

"When Boston needs help on its big fires, the firemen of the suburban departments are and always have been eager and willing to assist in every way. But how, will you tell me, can we send apparatus to aid the Boston firemen, with their strict fire lines, unless we have some passport to get through the fire lines? Many of our firemen are call men—that is they respond as best they can to an alarm without giving all their time to the department. How will they get through the fire lines if we are called to Boston?"

At the meeting of the fire chiefs' association, the customary distribution of 1915 fire badges was eagerly anticipated and a large number of the suburban chiefs were on hand. They all carried their 1914 badges to the meeting, expecting to follow the custom of former years and exchange them for the 1915 badges. But there were no badges and no word of explanation.

In reply to telephone inquiries, it was reported at the meeting that the chiefs would be provided with badges if they "came across" with $5 for every badge issued. The customary jovial meeting at once became an indignation meeting.

BRONCHIAL COUGHS
When the bronchial tubes are affected with that weakening, tickling cough, they need immediate and sensible treatment. The breath seems shorter because of mucous obstructions; usually fever is present and your head jars with every cough. Your chest aches and the inflammation often spreads to the lungs.
The food-tonic that has proven its worth for forty years—is Scott's Emulsion. It drives out the cold, which is the root of the trouble, and checks the cough by aiding the healing process of the enfeebled membranes.
If you are troubled with bronchitis or, know an afflicted friend, always remember that Scott's Emulsion builds strength while relieving the trouble.

Risks Her Life to Keep Baby Wife Foils Her Husband

Mrs. Charlotte Cannon and her four-year-old daughter Luella, one of the two children her husband sought to take from her.

Quincy Woman Dares Death Before Auto in Which Girls Are Being Taken.

Mrs. Charlotte Cannon of Quincy risked life or limb to keep her two little daughters, Margaret and Luella, in her custody.

Her husband, Silas Cannon, a West Somerville builder, went to Quincy and tried to take his children away from their mother, in a taxi-cab, the parents having been separated for some time.

He succeeded in getting the girls into the vehicle. He took them out of the home of Mrs. Cannon's mother, at Broadway and Washington streets, saying he was going to buy them new shoes. But Mrs. Cannon watched from a window and when she saw the girls put in a cab across the street she rushed out to prevent their departure.

The taxi-cab was moving when the undaunted mother placed herself in front of it.

This brought it to a stop and she promptly climbed into the cab and grappled with her husband.

After the police arrived and said they could do nothing, as Mr. Cannon has as much legal right to be custodian of his children as their mother, his wife went to the Quincy district court and asked for a warrant for her husband, charging him with non-support. Mrs. Cannon kept the children.

The couple also have a twelve-year-old son, named Howard.

111 SAVED FROM STEAMSHIP FIRE

BALTIMORE, Jan. 22.—Many passengers had narrow escapes, some of them being compelled to break from their staterooms, when the steamship Maryland of the Baltimore, Chesapeake & Atlantic line was burned to the water's edge early today, near Baltimore light, off Mountain bar, Chesapeake Bay.

No one was injured. The seventy-six passengers and crew of thirty-five were brought to this city by the City of Richmond and the City of Baltimore of the Chesapeake Steamship Company.

Sighting the blazing steamer, the two boats went full speed to the rescue. All the Maryland's passengers were taken first in the Maryland's lifeboats to the shore, and later taken aboard the rescue vessels. The fire started in the pantry on the port side.

Drink Hot Tea For a Bad Cold
Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.
It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.—Advertisement.

HUNT JEWEL LOOT IN DEATH SHACK

Satisfied that the missing jewelry stolen from the body of Maurice A. Albertson, murdered in Wakefield, is concealed in Wakefield, the police of that town made further search in the coal shack in the rear of No. 4 Columbia road today. Examination of the premises of the house to see if the gems were hidden there failed to bring results, and continued excavation in the vicinity are being made by the police.

The three defendants, Biagio Faloone and Ignatio Morella, indicted for murder in the first degree, and Luigi Grecchiola, indicted as an accessory before the fact, are to be tried together before the Superior Court at East Cambridge February 1.

The police of Boston and New York are on the lookout for the mother, sister and sweetheart of Biagio Faloone, due to reach this country from Italy this week. They want to question them on the past life of Faloone and Morella, who are said to have been companions in Italy.

It is doubtful if the immigration authorities will permit the relatives of Faloone to enter this country.

FIREMAN STOPS WILD RUNAWAYS

Ladderman M. J. McLaughlin of Ladder 9 on Hancock square, in Charlestown, made a regular moving picture stop of a runaway team at Main and Rutherford streets in Charlestown today.

The team, made up of two black horses hitched to a heavy dray, came on the run along Rutherford street and swung into Main just as McLaughlin, on his way from the fire house to breakfast, came by on Main street.

With a running jump McLaughlin grabbed the nearest bridle, threw his weight on, was dragged fifty feet, but held on and stopped the runaways. Brushing off his uniform McLaughlin strolled on to breakfast as though it was all in the day's work.

The team is owned by H. K. Lyman. It had been loaded with boxes of shoes at the Boston & Maine freight sheds. The horses became frightened and ran along South Eden street into Rutherford avenue. The dray slipped against a pole en route and half a dozen boxes of shoes were spilled.

An Open Letter
(About Bronchitis.)
August 3, 1914.
TO THE PUBLIC:
In March, 1914, I became afflicted with an attack of Bronchitis which forced me to remain in bed for two months. The doctor in attendance changed the medicine several times, and instead of improvement, I seemed to grow worse, for awhile I was despondent, until my wife read a little pamphlet advertising the "Essence Mentho-Laxene." Discouraged with what I had been using without effect, I was willing to try almost anything that sounded like a cure. The Mentho-Laxene was bought, the dose prepared according to direction, and before half the quantity was consumed the cough had abated and I was able to get up and get around the house. To make a long story short, I was at work four days after, and have never felt any symptoms of the dread disease since. All who are acquainted with Bronchitis will understand how hard it is to subdue the cough, but today I am willing to take an oath, or make an affidavit to the effect that my case of Bronchitis was as severe as ever afflicted man, and that I was positively cured of it in less than four days, all due to the wonderful curative powers of the "Essence Mentho-Laxene." Since that I have recommended it to all sufferers as I was, or to those who were subject to colds of any kind. In each case the medicine sustained the reputation I had given it, and all were loud in their praises of this truly valuable prescription.
All who may be skeptical in its use can write me, and I will cheerfully give them all the information they desire above my personal signature. Very respectfully, A. CAMPBELL,
2447 Lafayette St., Denver, Colo.
For the benefit of readers: Essence Mentho-Laxene can be obtained of druggists. A 2½ oz. bottle makes a full pint of cold and cough syrup. Full directions are with each bottle.—Advertisement.

Their Married Life

Helen Feels Lazy and Nora Spills Floor Oil Over a New Gown

Copyright, 1915, by International News Service.

"WELL, it be all right for me to clean those shelves this morning, ma'am!" said Nora, poking her head into the living room, where Helen was basking in the sun reading a magazine story.

"Yes, Nora, go right ahead," she said, raising her head for a moment, and then going back to the story which had reached an exciting part. "Be careful, though, about the things that are hanging in the closet."

Nora hardly heard the injunction, so anxious was she to get at the shelves in question. They were her pet abomination, and, as a rule, Helen would have rushed to help her remove the things from the closet, but somehow or other she felt lazy this morning, and without another thought had decided to allow Nora to struggle along with the whole thing.

Finishing the story after a while she went into her own room and tossed the silk comfortable off the bed while she threw the covers back to air. Somehow the morning had gone to her head, and she felt a little reckless about anything that might happen. That was usually the time in her experience when things actually did happen. But what could possibly happen, she thought gaily. It was too nice a day for them. She really must find something to do that would take her out in the sunshine. She could, take Winifred downtown for the shoes she needed, that was just the thing.

Nora was still busy with the closet in the hall, and was curiously still about it. Looking out Helen saw that she was not there. The closet had been emptied of all its things and the contents dumped on the bed in Winifred's room. Winifred, who had been busy playing paper dolls on the floor, had disappeared, and Helen, wondering what had happened, went out to the kitchen.

"What are doing in here, baby?" she said, pushing open the door of the butler's pantry to find Winifred bending over something Nora was looking at over by the window. Nora looked up, her eyes wide and frightened.

"What's the matter, Nora?" Has anything happened?"

"Oh, Mrs. Curtis," began Nora, "I am so sorry, but I couldn't help it, honestly I couldn't."

THE GOWN RUINED BY A SMUDGE OF OIL

Helen has crossed the room and was examining the thing that lay limply over Nora's knee. It was her best evening gown, the one she had seen down town in the window. It had been caught up in a sheet and hung away in the hall closet. Over the front breadth was an ominous dark stain that smelled peculiarly.

"The oil I was going to use on my dust cloth, ma'am," groaned Nora. "I had it up on the shelf, and when I was taking down Mr. Curtis's dress suit the hanger caught and pulled it over."

"Wasn't the cork in it, Nora?"

"No, ma'am, I was just going to use it." Nora was weeping noisily, and after a moment's reflection Helen hadn't the heart to say anything more. With a sigh she turned away. Perhaps if she had rushed to help Nora the minute she had told her about the shelves nothing would have happened. But it did seem hard that she must see to everything that was cleaned in the house. She took the dress with her and as she left the room, followed by Winifred, who was deeply interested, and the weeping Nora.

"Don't cry any more, Nora," she said, turning to comfort the heart-broken girl. Helen knew that Nora was deeply sincere, and as there was no need of crying about spilled milk, she hated to have the girl miserable.

"Finish the closet as quickly as possible, and then get out Miss Winifred's things. I am going to take her downtown."

Nora proceeded with the business of the moment, wiping her eyes every now and then, and rubbing mournfully at the gown that Helen had thrown over the foot of the bed in the room where all the other things had been placed.

During her dressing Helen wondered if anything could be done with the dress. The stain contained oil, and she doubted if it would come out. Perhaps she could have some new material inserted. At any rate it would serve to teach Nora a lesson. She was always leaving the corks out of bottles just when they should be corked up. And this had promised to be such a wonderful day, Helen thought regretfully. Well, she would see if the sunshine would make her feel any better.

Winifred was prancing around, anxious to get out in the air and light, and as Nora released her she bounded into Helen's room with a little scream of delight. Helen could not help smiling at the child's enthusiasm. Somehow it made her feel better, and when Nora came in with the dress made up into a neat package she smiled almost like her old self and Nora eagerly returned it.

"Don't worry about it, Nora," she said kindly. "I think probably I can have it cleaned. Anyway it will give me an excuse to have a new gown." Helen did not mean what she said, but she was rewarded by the look of relief that spread over Nora's homely features.

"Now, don't cry any more or your eyes will never get back to their normal condition," was Helen's parting injunction, and Nora looked almost happy again, although she hardly understood what Helen had meant.

At the cleaner's, a little especially shop where Helen frequently took things, she waited with her heart in her mouth while the package was unwrapped and the dress held up to view.

The woman exclaimed as she examined the spot:

"What a shame! I hardly think it will come out."

She took the dress with her into the back of the shop and returned in a few minutes, followed by a young man.

"What was it you spilled on it, madam?" he inquired politely.

"Furniture oil," explained Helen. "Do you think it will come out?"

He shook his head dubiously.

"I hardly think so, at any rate it would leave a stain of some kind."

"What would you advise me to do about it?" said Helen. Once more she was beginning to feel depressed.

ONLY FIVE DOLLARS TO HAVE IT MADE OVER

The woman who had been examining the gown looked up suddenly.

"We could repair it for you so that it would never be noticed, if you care to leave it," she volunteered.

"Oh, could you; I had no idea you did things like that here."

"Oh, yes, madam; we alter all the gowns we sell and it would be very little trouble to do this."

"What would you do?" said Helen, picking up the dress. "Insert a new front?"

"We could do that, or else we could take out the front breadth and insert some accordeon pleated chiffon and drape the other up."

Helen hesitated. She hated to have the dress altered in case she did not like it after all.

"Like this gown in the window?" she said, noticing Helen's hesitation, you see it would be quite a simple matter to make a skirt exactly like that. The style is much newer."

Helen examined the skirt of the little gown that the woman brought in and hung up on a hook.

"Why, yes, I like that very much, and you think mine could be made to look just the same?"

"I know it, madam," said the obliging woman. "We do a great deal of this kind of work. I am sure you will be pleased."

"All right, I think I'll have you fix it for me," said Helen, pulling out one of her cards. "And you deliver things out of town? How much will that be?"

"Five dollars, including the material," said the little woman briskly.

Helen thought that was very reasonable. The gown would be as new, and the cleaning alone would not cost less than two, and now she was going to have the dress altered, so that it would look almost new.

Winifred skipped along happily by her side as she went out of the store. The sun seemed to be shining brighter, and, after all, everything happens for the best, thought Helen to herself, with a warm little glow at her heart. She was glad now that she hadn't been cross with Nora.

Sweet Grapes

Phil Figgins was known throughout the length and breadth of Humpton to be an inveterate enemy of all motors and motorists, and for years, at tea parties and other exhilarating outbursts, the question of "Why Mr. Figgins is always such regular patron of the motor show?" had been a regular sheet-anchor to hostesses when the conversation began to die down.

But no one had had the courage to ask Figgins himself until the desperate deed was performed by a new curate who was suddenly launched on the little town. The curate himself was an enthusiastic motorist, and owned a motor-cycle with which he had been buzzing merrily. During the show he went up to Figgins with all the rashness of youth and questioned him.

"How is it," he asked, "that you who hate motors so much, come every year to the show?"

"Because," answered Figgins, "it gives me untold joy to be able to gaze at so many motors all at once that I don't have to dodge!"

An Ancient Builder

Probably the greatest builder the world ever had was Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon from 604 to 561 B. C. There is extensive ruin in Babylonia which does not show traces of his work. Nearly everywhere in Mesopotamia, and even in Persia, are found bricks bearing his name. He delighted in restoring the old temples. He surrounded defenceless cities with walls and moats. He confined the rivers to their courses with huge brick embankments. Shortly before his time Babylon was completely destroyed, but he rebuilt and enlarged the city.

An Old Offender

THE self-poised young man usually starts his love suit in a most correct fashion, choosing Cupid for his counsel. Although the verdict must come from the girl he loves, whose bright eyes have so bewitched him, he realizes that the jury is most important. In a masterly fashion he wins over her friends, one by one. Yet at the last moment, when victory seems near, wild panic seizes him. In vain does Cupid assure him he has won, and black gloom settles over him like a mantle. Well he realizes that for his happiness this is the court of last appeal, and in despair he throws himself on the mercy of the court. If he could only see her eyes, and the little smile hiding in the sweet curves of her lips, how quickly would his suspense and misery disappear!

The Value of Good Humor

Beatrice Fairfax Gives Some Useful Ideas on the Subject

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"THE smile lives longest in both man and memory."

There is actually no easier way of making friends with your luck than smiling at it. There is no simpler method of winning liking than facing people with a smile. And there is no more certain path to a cheerful outlook on life than a cheerful smile whatever befide. Besides all which, a smiling attitude of mind goes with a smiling face and wins success in that it helps you keep hopeful enough to fight your way over obstacles and to victory.

And how many people do you know who go through life with a smile?

Funny, isn't it, that when there is a highway to happiness, so lovable-ness and its ultimate good fortune stretching ahead of them, folks just calmly do not trouble to take it?

Perhaps it is because it is so easy to smile that people do not exert themselves to do it! You simply curve your lips up to start with. Hum a cheerful little tune, till the corners of your mouth curve up a bit — then deliberately keep them curving. Try to get a sparkle of kindly interest in what is going on about you to come to your eyes. Coax yourself to feel interested in what is going on around you. Swing along on the balls of your feet with your head held buoyantly high. And keep smiling, smiling all the while.

Hold that little smile on your face for five minutes morning and evening. Do it for a month. When you feel blue repeat the exercise—coax out the smile. At the end of the month you will feel it creeping out when you have not summoned it. And it will make you glow a bit to find yourself smiling at your work and as you go about the business life.

When things go wrong you will find you are able to smile. Pretty soon your mental habit will grow to match the physical one of smiling. You will find yourself thinking, "Oh, well, things can't be so dead wrong after all" and as things are never worse than we think they are, your little habit of smiling will help you turn events that might seem of bad portent to a scowling person into circumstances of good omen to the smiling, cheery creature that you have evolved out of your original beginnings, be they ever so gloomy.

The cheerful individual wins a welcome wherever he goes. Being liked is pleasure in itself and leads to all sorts of agreeable opportunities. When people have a delightful invitation to extend, they prefer to give a cheery soul the benefit of it rather than waste it on a dour and taciturn individual who will hardly be grateful for it.

And when there are good business opportunities to offer the chap who has ability and an agreeable personality is likely to be chosen rather than an even more able man who is unpleasant to have around the place.

If you have any troubles, try to ignore them and smile them away. Even your best friends won't enjoy listening to your tale of woe — they may be patient, kind and tolerant, but they won't feel the same wholesouled enthusiasm about being with you that they would experience if you were jollier and better company and able to add a bit to the sum total of human enjoyment and happiness by turning a smiling face on life.

A smile is a tonic for you and those who meet you. Lay in a big supply of it and dispense freely.

Under-Done

He was a vegetarian. The only blot on his newly-wedded bliss was the fact that his bride insisted on her breakfast bacon and her beef or chicken at other meals.

They were spending their honeymoon in the depths of the country, and one beautiful morning were wandering aimlessly over the green fields, plucking flowers as they went, and laughing in that irresponsible and careless way that betokens perfect happiness.

On a sudden came a lull in the bride's contentment, caused by the slow but steady advance of a herd of cows.

"Oh, Clifford!" she exclaimed, in horror. "What shall we do? I'm terrified!"

A look of superiority came into the bean-fed eye of Clifford.

"What are you terrified about, Maud?" he asked seriously. "You are not afraid of eating the poor creatures!"

"No! that's true!" she answered, clinging on to his arm. "But, Clifford, dear, these are too underdone!"

Doubtful Compliment

"Have I changed in the five years since we met in Paris?" asked an elderly woman who desired to be thought younger than she was.

"Madam," said the Frenchman, his hand on his heart, "you look like a rose of twenty years!"

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS.

It gives the tender hearted automobilist a pretty rough jolt to run over a dog—especially if it is a large dog!

A bore is a woman who tells you of the cute things her children said when you want to be telling her of the cleverness of your own!

Some men are known as sages, because no one around them has knowledge enough to correct their false statements.

"Unto him that hath shall be given." Also, the girl with one beau can get plenty more.

Doubt yourself, and you will accomplish little enough to confirm it.

When things look easy to do, don't undertake them unless you are prepared to have them prove the hardest tasks you have ever undertaken.

Most things we long for have lost their charm by the time we get them. People who cannot afford automobiles are often run down by those who can!

LOVE—THE ILLUSTRATION

Love's a misty cobweb, set in rainbow dew,
Love's the rainbow "pot of gold" none may ever view;
Love's the view we all admire—rising sun with heart of fire;
Gleam of longing and desire, where life's pilgrims all aspire.
Soon 'twill vanish into air,
Yet you follow everywhere
Love may summon you!

Love's a fragile morning glory—doomed at noon to close;
Love is life's first fairy story told ere sunset glows;
Love's the fading glow of night, vision paling from your sight;
Lost in dark and burnt by light, Love is naught—but end your plight
If you never dream its dream,
If you never catch the gleam
When love summons you!

The Fortunes of Fanny

Fanny Oversleeps and Mrs. Abbott Resents It and Starts a Train of Thought

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XLVIII.

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

FANNY HEDDEN slept little the night after her encounter with Jim Crandall. She was too nervous to lie still, but tossed on her narrow bed until dawn. Then she fell into such a heavy sleep that she did not open her eyes until Mrs. Abbott knocked at her door.

"Fanny!" she called. "What is the matter? Why aren't you up?"

The girl struggled to a sitting posture and glanced at the clock by her bed. It was ten minutes of eight and eight was the factory whistle.

"Oh, I have overslept!" she exclaimed, contritely. "I'm sorry, Mrs. Abbott. I'll dress as quickly as I can."

"Meanwhile I shall have to prepare breakfast," her mistress remarked. "It will not do for the young gentlemen to be late to school."

As is always the case when one hurries, Fanny's fingers were clumsy and bungling that morning. Yet in less than fifteen minutes she was in the kitchen. Here she found Mrs. Abbott just pouring the coffee. She had heated the cereal, cooked the eggs and made a plate of toast.

"Oh, Mrs. Abbott," Fanny said again, "I am so sorry I overslept!"

Mrs. Abbott glanced at her searchingly. "You must have been out very late," she accused. "Yet when I came in all was so dark and quiet that I took it for granted you were in bed —but I suppose you weren't."

"I was in bed long before you came home," Fanny said. "But I did not get to sleep until daylight."

Mrs. Abbott said no more, but as Fanny carried the toast into the dining room Emily was uttering a protest.

"Really, mother," she was saying, "it is a shame that you should have had to cook the breakfast! I wish you had called me to help you. It is outrageous that you should have to do that kind of thing!"

The words were accompanied by a glance at Fanny, and the maid colored under the indirect reproof.

"Don't worry, dear," the mother said easily. "Fanny overslept. I am sure it will not happen again."

FANNY SHOULD GO TO BED EARLIER

"Fanny should go to bed at an earlier hour," Emily declared sententiously.

"Then she will awake in time. It is very unjust, surely, for a young girl to be out so late at night."

Fanny's nerves were worn from her experiences of yesterday and from her restless night, and the speech stung her unbearably. She started to speak, but Mrs. Abbott checked her. "Never mind," she interposed. "I wish no more discussion of this subject. It is of no interest to any of us. Fanny, you may go now and dust the living room so that we may go in there as soon as breakfast is over. We will wait on ourselves. It is no late that I want you to make up the time you have lost."

Fanny went about her work, her cheeks burning with indignation. Why need she submit to this kind of thing? She did not pause to consider that had she been employed in a shop or office and slept so late that somebody else had to do her work until her arrival, she would have been reprimanded. What rankled most was that her employer's daughter had interfered and had seemed to doubt the truth of the maid's statements. No, Fanny thought, she would not stand this much longer. Yet what could she do? She might seek another position—and find it no better than this one. Oh, she hated living in service!

Mrs. Abbott's voice broke in upon her musings. "The dumbwaiter bell is ringing, Fanny?" she cried. "I think it is the iceman. Come and take the ice off the waiter, please."

Fanny obeyed. Why could not one of the members of the family perform this little service for her? Mrs. Abbott's voice close to her made her start.

"Fanny," she reproved, "I noticed when I was getting the butter from the icebox this morning that there is a peculiar, close odor about the box itself. Did you scald it out yesterday?"

"No, ma'am," Fanny acknowledged. "I did it day before yesterday. I think three times a week is often enough—isn't it?"

"Indeed it is not!" Mrs. Abbott declared. "Don't neglect it again. I also noticed that there were cake crumbs about the pantry this morning. They will attract roaches. You must be more careful about such things."

"The crumbs were not there when I went out yesterday afternoon," Fanny defended herself. She felt her temper rising. "If there were crumbs there this morning it was none of my doing."

SHE IS REPROVED FOR SPEAKING HER MIND

"Fanny!" Mrs. Abbott exclaimed. "That tone is something new for you. You are usually polite. I say the crumbs were there. We were all out late last night. How could they have come there?"

"I suppose one of the boys dropped them when they came in to get the pantry for cake late last night. I heard them—or somebody—go in there—and I supposed it was the boys."

"The—who?" Mrs. Abbott's tone indicated that she was displeased.

"The boys," Fanny repeated. She was too much annoyed to see for the moment what her error of speech had been.

"The young gentlemen, if you please, Fanny," Mrs. Abbott corrected. Then, as the girl did not reply, she went on: "I am afraid that you had too gay a time yesterday, child. Your manner is almost insolent this morning. I make excuses for you as I will your negligence in certain matters, but I want to warn you that you must not become careless in the future. Now go and eat your breakfast, then get to your work."

Fanny's breakfast was cold, but she was too depressed to trouble to heat it. Her thoughts were so gloomy that they deprived her of appetite. Her interview with Crandall had set the whole world wrong. The recollection of Jos Brown's championship brought her no comfort. He was the silliest man she knew, she told herself, yet what construction might he not have put upon her scene with Crandall? And, even if this had not been witnessed, surely he would not care to associate with a girl who was living in domestic service!

BABSON OFF ON HUNT FOR TRADE

Roger W. Babson, Boston's forecast statistician, has sailed for South America from New York on the steamship Kroonland as a special business ambassador for Massachusetts. He has been commissioned as such by Governor Walsh. He will be gone three months and travel 18,000 miles, if he completes his itinerary. Mr. Babson's mission is to foster commerce between this State and the Latin-American republics.

It is the hope of those who sent Mr. Babson on this mission to make arrangements which will enable all neutral countries in this hemisphere, including the United States, to formally request Germany and the allies to sanction a neutral trade zone. The object is to safeguard traffic between the United States and South America. Such an arrangement would enable the ships of all nations to carry cargoes without fear of being held up by German, British or any other commerce destroyers. It would build up trade between this country and South America while the war is going on in Europe.

She carries one message from Governor Whitman of New York to Governor Johnson of California, and another from Mayor Mitchel of New York to Mayor Rolph of San Francisco. She will meet everybody who is to be met and see everything that is to be seen. Her busy typewriter will record every phase of the trip for the Hearst newspapers, and the faithful camera man at her side will gather into his films all the pictorial impressions of the trip for the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.

Get acquainted with Grace Darling today, for you are going to hear lots about her and from her, and you are going to see her often. You are going to see her passing the Gatun locks and looking at the poppy-decked hills that guard the Golden Gate and the wonder part of the Pacific. You will see her amid the curious cosmopolitan throngs which will gather at this most unique among expositions. She will see the realization of dreams that Balboa and Drake, who first traveled the way she takes, never dreamed to dream.

And Grace Darling has a big mission. It is to prove to the skeptics who hold that romance and adventure died with the coming of steam and electricity that they both live even more wonderfully and alluring today if the skepticism can be cast aside.

Grace Darling is starting early for the Panama-Pacific Exposition in order that you will not miss anything there. She will be there when the opening ceremonies take place and the work of ages is crowned with the great world fete.

At Panama she will see the realization of the dream of Balboa, who first conceived the idea of the Panama Canal when he gazed upon the new waters of the Pacific from the peak at Darien. She will see the triumph achieved by American engineers and American financiering where the engineers who dug the Suez Canal and the genius of De Lesseps failed.

She will see the Exposition itself the supreme pageant of the westward journey, the march which was begun by the Franciscan padres, followed by the gold hunters and then the rumbling prairie schooners and the old square-rigged ships which battered their way "around the Horn."

All these wonders Grace Darling will bring home to the readers of the Hearst newspapers and to the millions who see the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial films.

She left on the Almirante for the Panama Canal, changing to the Great Northern at Colon and thence straight for the Golden Gate.

Her first article will appear in next Sunday's Boston Sunday AMERICAN. Begin then to follow the adventures of the wonder girl, Grace Darling, on her trip among the wonders of our own United States.

New York Officials Bid Her Good-by as She Leaves on Steamer.

If you have been thrilled by the fairy stories of the magic carpets which carried beautiful princesses to imaginary places and the tales of seven league boots which accomplished miracles in transportation you will be more thrilled by the adventures of the wonder girl, Grace Darling.

For Grace Darling is a real heroine, living, breathing, beautiful American girl, and she will visit real cities and the real wonder places of the world. The best of it is that these real places are more wonderful than any of the places imagined by the tellers of fairy stories.

Ginter Employes Hold Sixth Dance

The sixth annual ball of the Ginter Company Employes' Association was held at Convention Hall with more than 700 persons present. President A. F. Goodwin and Secretary and General Manager James C. Duane were guests of honor.

The committee in charge included James J. Curry, Louis L. Glazier, N. E. Whittemore, Jeremiah Hannon, Frank White, E. H. Sammon, P. J. Watson, Thomas McManus, Thomas P. Cox, John McGloin and Karl B. Goodwin.

DEMANDS PARDON JUSTICE FOR ALL

"This investigation should proceed in order that the Legislature can give it plain that the poorest, most obscure citizen from Provincetown to Lenox will have the same rights meted out to him as to the man who enjoys the friendship of Charley Choate of Southboro and Speaker declared Representative Cadbury of Worcester, in asking the Joint Legislative Committee on Rules to recommend his order for an investigation by a legislative committee of the pardon of John A. Hall, the Wilmington bank looter and other pardons granted by Governor Walsh last year.

"Member of the 1914 Governor's Council said he voted for the Hall pardon because other councilors, who had previously assisted him, said it was time for him to reciprocate," said Washburn.

"I am not instituting impeachment proceedings. I am starting a movement without attempting to say where it will end.

"If I were Governor Walsh I would be here today urging the adoption of this order.

"Does extenuating circumstance connected with the Hall case was that much of the stolen money was contributed to the Southbridge Y. M. C. A.?

"Do you send two men over to prison at Charlestown, one of whom has stolen an apple and the other has robbed a bank cashier and others of $500, from the poor people who deposited their money in a savings bank. The one couldn't raise and the man who stole the apple learns he has been sentenced at the same term as John Hall, and that while Hall will be released shortly, he will have to serve every minute of his sentence."

BABY'S BODY BROKE OUT WITH ECZEMA

And Blisters Would Form, Skin Began to Crack Open. After First Day's Use Cuticura Soap and Ointment Baby Slept All Night.

54 Myrtle St., W. Lynn, Mass.—"At the age of ten months my baby began breaking out on his body. It looked as though he chafed. He would wake up at night and cry till morning. His skin was red and raw and blisters would form and then bleed. He used to fuss and cry all the time. It troubled him the most at night as it would burn so I had to get up and hold him two or three hours at a time. The eczema got so bad the skin soon began to crack open.

"A friend of mine told me to get a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Ointment. I got them, gave him a good bath in warm water and Cuticura Soap, then applied the Ointment. In one day I saw a difference and that night he slept all night. The eczema continued growing better until it all disappeared in one week." (Signed) Mrs. Gladys Bernard, October 16, 1914.

WOMAN IN FIGHT FOR STATE BOARD

The State House has a ballot battle which is both a "votes for women" and a "vote for a woman" affair.

Miss Amy F. Acton, suffragist and chief State inspector of incorporated charities, is battling for election to the State Retirement Board. Three men are seeking the same place, and the election is in the hands of the 4,000 employes of the State to depart, vote and thereby save, if eligible to retirement on a pension. More than 1,500 women employes of the State are working to support Miss Acton.

Miss Katherine H. Walsh, suffragist and a clerk in the office of the Governor's Executive Council, who was one of the five nominees at the recent primaries, has withdrawn from the contest so that the vote for women suffragists will not be split. The slogan is "Vote for a woman, Miss Acton."

Miss Acton, in waging her contest on the principle that the women employes should be represented on the retirement board.

The polls in the election will close February 1. The men and later for the position on the board are Carl A. Raymond, who seeks re-election; Leopold F. Quinn of Lynnfield, and George H. Scott, a clerk at the Bobbin State Hospital.

EIGHT SISTER TOWNS JOIN SALEM IN BIG FIRE BATTLE

Many Firemen Overcome in Saving Witch City's Business Section from Destruction.

Twenty firemen were overcome by smoke and by steam, some of them so badly that they had to be taken to hospitals after having gone out at 4 a.m. today after being called out the Leavitt block at 9 o'clock last night. Many others were slightly affected.

The fire, the most severe of the first half of the year, was finally brought under control at 7 a.m. today, after fresh air had restored him he returned to direct his men.

Fifty guests and twenty employes of the Hotel Essex, which occupied the three upper floors of the Leavitt block, escaped without injury. But Mrs. Walter K. Bigelow, who was ill in her hotel room, was carried out, also Mrs. Robert Brookhouse, eighty-six years old, and William F. Haley of Boston.

The losses in this of the Second Corps Cadets and of Company H, 8th Regiment, were early on the scene to enforce order. The colonel of the Second A. Regiment, Lieutenant Thye marched with the assistance to the firemen, who were tired.

The entire lower floor of the block, except for the store of Jewett the Essex House, was occupied by stores. The two upper stories contained the rooms of the hotel and a few offices.

The valuation of the property and its stores was estimated as follows:

$100,000—Leavitt Block, including Hotel Essex.

GIBBONS WHIPS JIMMY CLABBY

By SAM P. HALL.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 22.—Mike Gibbons' phantom tactics and stiff, clean punching with both hands brought him home a winner over Jimmy Clabby, the champion middleweight belt holder, in ten rounds of merry milling.

The Hammond man left the ring with his championship reputation shot full of holes. He still has the belt, but Gibbons has the credit of handing him a licking in an impressive fashion. Mike was the master in all except the final period, when a blizzardly finish by Clabby earned him a slight shade.

The first three rounds were fairly even though it could be seen that Gibbons was not going to assert his superiority. Starting with the fourth round Mike went better than James for six solid fighting spells. On two occasions stunning right crosses made Clabby sag at the knees and forced him to rush for cover.

At one stage, it looked as though Jim surely would topple over, but his stout Irish heart pulled him through the crisis and spurred him to make a finish that won him the admiration of the folks present.

Gibbons' showing was wonderful. Not since boxing was revived in Wisconsin has anybody with his all round fighting class showed his boxing goods in a Milwaukee ring. He has everything in the way of skilful glove play that Packey McFarland possesses, and in addition a punch in either hand. Mike used a left hook, and a rippling right cross with crushing effect after he opened up in the fourth round.

Tinker Denies Mann Will Play with Feds

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—Joe Tinker, manager of the Chifeds, today denied a report from Lincoln, Neb., that Outfielder Leslie Mann, of the Boston Braves, would play next season with his team.

Mann, it was announced in Lincoln, signed a two-year contract with Tinker calling for a salary of $1,000 a month during the playing season, in addition to which he is to receive a bonus of $5,000.

"When I talked with Mann some weeks ago," said Tinker, "he told me he wanted to stay with the Braves because he thought they would win another pennant or two."

"The Rabbit's" Column

By Walter J. Maranville

SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

This baseball suit brought by the Federal League against Organized Baseball will serve to clear the atmosphere. There are those—and among them some magnates who say that if Organized Baseball loses the case now being tried at Chicago, that baseball will be ruined, that the structure of the national game will tumble like a house of cards.

* * *

I do not believe anything of the sort. You cannot kill baseball.

* * *

There has been no disposition shown by the defendants, otherwise known as Organized Baseball, to sidestep the suit. On the contrary the big men of the game—Herrmann, Tener, Johnson and the big league club owners have shown that they are prepared to fight to a finish without any attempt to delay the case. They want to know where they are standing just as much as the Federal Leaguers.

* * *

No matter which side wins, the national game should be the gainer.

* * *

A suit of this kind, no matter whether ill-advised or not, should clear up the baseball atmosphere and put the game on a plane where at least it will have a solid foundation, and, let us hope, a superstructure that cannot be toppled over by any set of promoters in the future.

* * *

If there is anything bad in baseball let us have it pruned out. If there is anything good in baseball as now conducted, let the good remain.

* * *

Baseball cannot be killed, but it may be purified by the court proceedings at Chicago.

* * *

In every baseball war there has been court proceedings, but never before has there been an attempt to bring a suit of such magnitude. Usually the law has been invoked to restrain jumping players. This time the Federals have assailed the game at its very foundation.

* * *

Those of us who are strong for Organized Baseball will believe that, as was the case in the Killefer suit, the Federal League has not gone into the court with "clean hands." President Gilmore, of the Feds, and his followers tried to establish a league that would be considered as good as the two majors, both in playing strength and in drawing ability. They admitted last Fall that they did not succeed in either respect.

* * *

Then they tried to get Organized Baseball to take them in as a partner. Next two members of the Federals tried to buy their way into the major leagues. Again they failed. If the national game is conducted in such a heinous manner as claimed by the Feds, the latter should have adopted a different course if they expected the court to look upon them as purifiers or reformers.

* * *

For the sake of the game, however, it is hoped that Judge Landis will overlook the motives that prompted the Feds to bring suit. Whether the Feds came into court with "clean hands" or not, now is the time to have a good baseball housecleaning if there is anything to clean. If baseball is being conducted by Organized Baseball on the wrong lines now is the time to find it out. The men who own ball clubs should be told what they can do and what they cannot do.

* * *

The results of this suit should clear the atmosphere. When it is settled and baseball gets straightened out on the lines indicated by the court decision the old national game should be in a better position than ever before.

* * *

And let us hope that the new conditions will be such that the public, which after all pays the freight and without which there would be no profitable employment for players and umpires, no profits for club owners and no fat jobs for league executives, will get a square deal.

* * *

I am a fast semi-professional ball player, but last year I was troubled with sore arm, that is, I could not get any speed in my delivery. I do not want to be convicted that way this year, could you give me any advice that will cure my sore arm and help me?

Lowell, Mass. E. F. FEDS.

I cannot in justice answer any questions in regard to lame arms. Each case is different and ought really to be examined upon by an expert. The best advice I can give is to see some good trainer—one that knows his business thoroughly.

* * *

Please let me know if George Ebert has ever signed for the New York Nationals since 1911.

E. F. FEDS.

Everett.

* * *

I do not find his name in the records.

* * *

Who was the first man to strike out in the last World's Series and who was the first to make a single?

EDWARD GIBLIN.

Lowell, Mass.

Connolly of the Braves struck out in the first inning of the first game. Murphy of the Athletics made a single in the first inning of the first game.

* * *

Harry Donahue, No. 60 Standish avenue, Plymouth—See answer to W. M. of Lowell.

* * *

It is the last of the ninth, and three runs would win the game. The man up singles for second and steals on the first ball. The next man singles, and on the first ball pitched starts for second, but the batter hits the ball over short for a single, and the runner going down to second little dreaming that he would hit the ball looks up in time to see the left fielder catch the ball on the bounce, and thinking that he had caught it on the fly starts back to first, thereby fast he would be doubled up. The fielder throws the ball to the first baseman, who tags the runner standing on the first base, but, unluckily for him, he had made the single over which had scarcely left the umpire declared the side men out. Now my question is, was not the man who was going down to second supposed to be put out or a force play, instead of being tagged and also how could anyone with common sense declare a man out who was standing on first after making a safe hit. This play broke up a game that was sure to be a corker. Please decide.

Now Rabbit I would like to hear from you as soon as it is convenient.

E. H. H.

Portland, Me.

The man running to second was forced off first by the man who hit over short, but he was not out until the ball got to second ahead of him, or he was tagged on the baselines. As for the man standing on first he was clearly safe and the umpire was wrong in declaring him out.

Mike Ryan to Coach Bates Track Team

LEWISTON, Me., Jan. 22.—Michael J. Ryan of New York, who represented America in the 1912 Olympic games at Stockholm, Sweden, has been appointed coach of the Bates College track team. Coach Morrill, who was recently appointed, has reported that it is impossible for him to return owing to the illness of his mother.

JUDGE MAY THROW OUT 'FEDS' SUITS

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—When the hearing on the Federal League suit against Organized Baseball is resumed here today it is possible that Judge Landis may throw the case out of court. The Judge is in doubt as to his legal right to render a decision on the case. He isn't convinced that it was a matter to be brought up in a federal court. If the case is thrown out the Federal League will have to resort to a State court for a hearing.

Such action would be dreaded by the Federal Leaguers, while the O. B. men would consider it as good as a victory. It would mean that the sensational charge of violating the Sherman anti-trust law would be groundless. The Federals still might seek aid in a lower court on the common law charge brought against Organized Baseball.

The jolt came when Keene H. Addington, attorney for the Feds, began a perusal of the bill of complaint filed by his client. At the request for arguments on the question of jurisdiction, Addington cited numerous cases which he claimed were similar and which had been tried in the United States District Court. He claimed the condition of diversity of citizenship of the defendants already drawn into the courtroom.

He even brought out the thirteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States, which prohibits slavery and cited two cases of peonage which he claimed similar to the present case.

Zbyszko Starts Work for Mat Bout Here

Walek Zbyszko, the clever young Polish wrestler, will arrive here today to complete training for his match with Isanda Bey, the Tartar, which takes place Monday night in Mechanics Building as the principal feature of the international tournament.

Lemle is in grand fettle for his match with Lurich and banks strongly on wiping out the defeat he sustained when he met Lurich two years ago.

Because of the fact that many of the wrestlers are in the elimination tournament, Promoter Tuohey will try to get Burns and Michaloff together.

'Cannot Eliminate Paid College Coach'

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 22.—The Daily Princetonian, the undergraduates' newspaper at the university, editorially expresses the opinion that the paid coach in college athletics will never be eliminated.

The Princetonian offers the argument that American college athletics cannot be placed on the same pure plane as they are in the English universities, until the American mind undergoes a change, and it believes that such a change is quite unlikely to occur.

Suggest Lexington and Concord Course for B. A. A. Marathon

Prominent citizens of Lexington and Concord have suggested that hereafter the annual B. A. A. marathon race on April 19 be held over a course passing through the aforementioned towns in order to add to the celebration commemorating the revolutionary battles in that territory.

By laying out a course from Concord through Bedford, Lexington, Arlington, Winchester, Medford, Everett, Charlestown and Boston the required marathon distance could be easily acquired.

Another more southerly route has been suggested through Concord, Lincoln, Lexington, Waltham, Belmont and Cambridge.

SPORT QUERIES.

Sporting Editor, Boston AMERICAN:
Kindly state when the Harvard and Yale crews engaged in their first race and also the number of victories scored by each eight.

"CAMBRIDGE."

Harvard and Yale held their first boat race in 1855. These two rivals have engaged in forty-seven contests on the water, the sons of Old Eli winning on twenty-four occasions while the Harvard shell finished first twenty-three times.

Sporting Editor, Boston AMERICAN:
Would like to know whether Bill Barnes and Eddie Merrill are going to be in the A. A. U. track meet in Boston.

E. HOLDEN.

Neither of these speedy runners will compete for the Unicorn club during the indoor season, but they may be induced to enter competition again when the outdoor campaign gets underway. If they do so they will undoubtedly battle for Jack Ryder's team.

Sporting Editor, Boston AMERICAN:
Is Bobby McLean going to stay in the Boston Arena this season?

ARENA.

There is but little chance of the Chicago speed king shooting here this year as he is a professional and the Arena management does not care a great deal about staging events of any kind between the semi-pro cheers.

Sporting Editor, Boston AMERICAN:
I would appreciate it if you would state in the "Question Corner" how Hobey Baker compares with the professional hockey players in Canada.

G. H. Portland.

The leading professional hockey players in Canada have a little something on the former Princeton star, but the rank and file of the Canadian "pros" are not superior to the dashing leader of the St. Nicholas hockey club.

Sporting Editor, Boston AMERICAN:
In Stanley Ketchel, the former middleweight champion, ever knocked out a man in the ring?

T. E. M. Dorchester.

Ketchel was stopped twice. Billy Papke turned the trick at Los Angeles on September 9, 1908, landing a dream smash in the twelfth session, while Jack Johnson kayoed our Ketchel in the same number of rounds at Colma, Cal., on October 16, 1909.

MAY TRY TO OUST GARRY HERRMANN

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—There is a move on foot to oust Garry Herrmann as chairman of the National Commission.

Even if the Federals do not succeed in effecting the dissolution of the National Commission, there is a strong possibility that the make-up of the ruling body of baseball will be radically altered.

Within a short time Ban Johnson and John K. Tener will need to elect the third member of the commission, and it is understood that the president of the American League will oppose the re-election of Herrmann.

Men close to Johnson have been informed that he believes it would be advisable to place on the commission some prominent sportsman not connected with the business of baseball, preferably a lawyer.

Coffroth to Stage Bouts in Mexico

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 22.—Jimmy Coffroth, dean of local boxing promoters, today denied that he would invade New Orleans. Instead he is going to Tia Juana, Mexico, just across the line from San Diego.

Girls Are Barred from Boxing Bouts at Waltham High

Girl students were barred from a series of wrestling and boxing bouts at the Waltham High School, because, in the opinion of the School Board, their conduct at the last exhibition was not exemplary and did not conduce to the elevation of impartial sportsmanship.

The contests were attended by Superintendent of Schools Solomon, Mrs. Charles E. Stearns, through whose activity the girls were excluded, Charles E. Frost, Dr. Henry A. Wood, Harry Dana, the athletic instructor, and a number of public school teachers.

Mrs. Stearns does not favor the abolition of boxing among boys, as she feels it is necessary, but she does believe that girls should not be present at contests of this kind.

Bowdoin on Way Here for Big Relay Race

BRUNSWICK, Me., Jan. 22.—The Bowdoin College relay team, which is to race against Brown University at the Coast Artillery meet tomorrow night, left here today for Boston. Two Boston boys, Eddie Balfe, 17, formerly of Dorchester High School, and Charlie Wyman, 16, the former English High School sprinter, were chosen as members of the team.

RITCHIE AGREES TO MEET WELSH

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 22.—Willie Ritchie has changed his mind. He also has discovered that it will be possible for him to make 135 pounds at 2 o'clock for a ten-round bout with Freddie Welsh in New York next month, so this afternoon he accepted the offer made to him by Promoter Jimmy Johnston.

"At first I refused to make weight for Welsh unless for a ten-round battle," explained Willie, "but after thinking the matter over I have come to the conclusion that I can beat him at any weight or over any route, so the match is on so far as I am concerned."

Ritchie plans to leave for New York early next month.

BAY STATE FARM LAD'S $50,000 JOB

BY S. C. FORBES.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—From farm boy to president of the greatest trust company in the world, with a salary of probably a thousand dollars a week.

That is the record just attained by Charles H. Sabin, when he was elected president of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York.

And his climb from the milk stool to the presidency of an institution, which did a foreign exchange business alone last year of four billion dollars—$4,000,000,000—has taken him only twenty-eight years!

Such a career is worthy of comment in these days of discontent and of grumbling, that the young man without "influence" or "pull" cannot rise fast or far.

We have now the spectacle of the greatest note at bank in the country and the greatest trust company in the whole world, each presided over by ex-farm boys. Mr. Sabin's spectacular success, indeed, is on a par with that of Frank A. Vanderlip, head of the National City Bank of New York.

MANY RISE FROM THE LOWLY.

The truth is, that five of every six really big executive positions in the United States are now filled by men who started in humble circumstances and had to make their own way and create their own influence.

Glance over the country's roll of railroad presidents; you will find, almost without exception, that the heads of our leading systems began at the bottom and forged ahead through sheer ability and unremitting application of body and brain.

Our principal industrial corporations are no longer captained by figureheads, the scions of wealthy families, but by men who started at scratch and had to run their race unaided by riches or powerful friends.

So with the majority of our important financial institutions. Directors may be plutocratic nobodies, but the active management must be placed in the hands of hard workers, who have been through the winnowing mill of practical experience.

The struggle for success in every line of business is so keen today that responsible positions must be awarded to men of solid merit, of indefatigable energy, of unbounded optimism, of unflinching courage and possessing infinite faith in the worthiness of their life's work.

There are more $50,000 a year jobs than there are $50,000 a year men available to fill them.

To discharge the duties of most positions paying $50,000 to $100,000 a year, calls for the expenditure of as much vitality that few mortals can stand the strain without breaking down, wholly or partially, every now and again.

It is my privileges to know intimately numbers of America's oldest men of affairs, and I can tell you that those of us who occupy less conspicuous positions need seldom envy them.

FOUR BILLION FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

I have said that the institution of which Mr. Sabin has become president did $4,000,000,000 of foreign exchange business last year. Well, the head of the exchange department, Max May, is about the hardest working man I've ever known in all my investigations. I can't understand how he stands it and have repeatedly told him so.

The turnover in the Guaranty's trust department in 1914 was $2,000,000,000. Think of that!

No wonder President Alexander J. Hemphill proposed that he become chairman of the board, and that Mr. Sabin be elevated to the presidency to share the constantly multiplying duties.

And the duties of this and other progressive executives in our strong financial institutions are destined to increase inordinately under the new conditions being created by the European industrial and financial upheaval. Unparalleled opportunities are opening up. They will be seized by those who know how to reach out for them.

If the United States is to become, as is hoped, the financial centre of the world, men of the Sabin stamp must be given scope to exercise their abilities and to turn their foresight into action.

Mr. Sabin has come to the forefront within the last five years. He is one of a group of youngish men who have made financial history—not, of course, without, at the same time, making mistakes, but experience should rectify this. He ranks with such stalwarts as Henry P. Davison of Morgan & Co., President Wiggin of the Chase National Bank, President Vanderlip of the National City Bank, President Woodward of the Hanover National Bank, Governor Strong of the Federal Reserve Bank, George B. Reynolds and the Forgan of Chicago and Gaston of Boston.

Here is the brief chapter-and-verse account of Mr. Sabin's career, as given out yesterday:

BIRTH OF BAY STATE.

Mr. Sabin, although still a young man, having but recently reached his forty-sixth birthday, has had a most remarkable career. He was born in Williamstown, Mass., in 1868. His early life was spent on a farm, where, until he was eighteen, he had the opportunity of laying the foundation for the rugged constitution he now enjoys. He graduated from Grayloch Institute in 1885.

Mr. Sabin began his banking career in 1887 in the National Commercial Bank; was made cashier of the Park Bank of Albany in 1893; was cashier of the Albany City National Bank from 1898 to 1902, and was then elected vice-president of the National Commercial Bank, with which the Albany City National was consolidated. In 1907 he was elected president of the National Copper Bank of New York, and, upon its merger with the Mechanics National Bank in 1910, he was made vice-president of the latter institution. In July of that year he was elected vice-president and director of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York.

It is said that every bank with which Mr. Sabin has been connected has shown remarkable progress under his direction. For instance, the cashier of the Albany City National Bank back in 1897, he more than doubled its deposits in two years. The National Commercial Bank of Albany exhibited equally remarkable gains, and the National Copper Bank in the three years of its existence, accumulated total deposits of over $20,000,000, a feat which was considered most extraordinary by the older heads in Wall Street. While these achievements to his credit it is interesting to contemplate what will be the result of his administration as president of the big Guaranty Trust Company.

One Public Man Who Acknowledges His Indebtedness to His Wife

If He Uses the Same Judgment in His Official Career His Administration Is Sure to Be a Success

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company

The Governor of Colorado, on taking office, did not make the usual bombastic speech about his terrific struggle to rise from poverty to his present proud position.

He wisely refrained from congratulating the people of Colorado on securing a self-made man—a man of the people—a man who from his earliest childhood had determined to succeed, and who now stood before them, his high object attained.

This Governor is not the usual sort of public man. In his inaugural address he took no credit to himself, nor did he make any glittering promises of what he was going to do.

Instead he humbly and reverently acknowledged his debt to his wife, and announced that he intended to make her "assistant Governor" and to be guided by her counsel in his official duties.

Here is a Governor who ought to succeed, and who has ten chances of success where the vainglorious, bragging self-made man has one.

There have, of course, been Governors who have been ruled by their wives. There have been public men whose successes have been made by their wives. But few of them even knew it, and none of them ever acknowledged it.

The gentlemen who were ruled by their wives failed. They failed not because they were bossed, but because they were too dull to know that they were bossed, and supposed that all their acts sprang from their own great intellects.

Those who consulted their wives in private have been more successful. They, at least, were able to recognize counsel that was unselfish and in their own interest.

They were able to avail themselves of good judgment without the weak fear that the wife might become inflated with her power and try to "run the whole show."

There may, of course, have been instances of men who publicly acknowledged their debt to their wives, but they are not conspicuous in history.

And if Colorado's Governor, having made this acknowledgment, will abide by his decision and make his career in public life a partnership affair, the men and the women and the children of Colorado ought to profit by his administration.

Barrie's best and most ingenious play deals with a man who rises high in public life because, as he supposes, of his own merits and industry.

The truth is that he is a rather dull, vain and idle man, and that the love of his wife, her promptings and assistance, have made him what he is.

The play is a true picture of many households—it is particularly true of many families where the man is a seeker after public recognition.

The wife interested only in her husband quietly determines that he shall succeed. Where he lacks judgment she supplies it. Where he is weak and vacillating she counsels courage and firmness.

If he is deficient in some branch of knowledge that is useful to his career she patiently endeavors to improve him in it.

Here is not the selfish interest of the office seeker or the man or woman who has an axe to grind.

She has no corporate interests to serve, no gang of organized lawbreakers to protect.

Of all his advisers she is the one who is interested in his success, because she wants to be proud of him. And she alone, of all who are around him, is willing to make sacrifices that he may get the honor and credit that he so much desires.

It has been said that most of the business failures come to men who do not tell their business to their wives. This is in a large measure true, for in business as well as in public life it is the wife who can best be trusted to take an honest and unselfish interest in the affairs of her husband.

No man, either in business or in politics, would confide in his wife a belief that only by graft or dishonesty could he succeed. And no man who had plans of that sort would dare to talk them over with his wife.

As a consequence, the men who take their wives into confidence lead clean public and private lives, and that is the kind of lives that bring success—real success—in business or in office.

The Governor of Colorado has set a fine example for other public officials. When men honestly and openly acknowledge that the idea that they are self-made is nonsense, and are willing to consult their wives in public as well as private, the States and the nation will be better governed.

This will take real courage, for no man likes to admit that any agency on earth outside himself had anything to do with the forming of a successful career.

But real courage as well as real honesty is necessary in politics as well as in business.

It is not an experiment that this Governor is trying. If his ability matches his judgment he is sure to succeed, and the people of his State are to be congratulated on their discernment in electing him.

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

Why Do They Do It?

If you should find your Congressman
Behind a black cigar
Engaged in emptying a can
In some secluded bar,
Don't tell him sternly that you think
His morals aren't on straight.
He didn't go in there to drink—
But to investigate.
He's getting needful information
On anti-liquor legislation.

Be not discouraged or dismayed
If prowling cops some night
Should get him in a poolroom raid
And swear they got him right.
He would not bet upon a horse
And tarnish his good name.
He came to get the facts, of course,
About a gambling game.
He wants to give a grateful nation
Strong anti-betting legislation.

Justice Cannot Be Done in the Dark

A Pittsburgh man indicted twenty-two years ago has just been tried. The authorities were evidently waiting until they could get a little light on the crime.

Official Negligence

The authorities in Terre Haute must be strangely lacking in energy. There have been only thirty indictments for election frauds there, and the voting population must be at least twice that.

True Prodigality

With the generosity of the man who would give all his wife's relations to his country, Germany is offering Italy almost anything she desires in the way of Austrian territory.

The Country Is Proud of Them

What concerns us more than the fact that Taft and T. R. were both on the same train was the fact that they both were willing to take a chance on traveling on the New Haven.

Robbing the Grave of Its Terrors

It must be a lot of comfort to the victims of a murder to know that it was not criminal intent but merely subconscious suggestion that caused the crime.

And Business Is Still Saying "Ouch"

"We have been trying to break the shackles from business," said Mr. Wilson. With a sledge hammer!

What Else Is There to Do?

Our Tommy is a trouble,
His passion is to shirk;
He simply will not study,
He simply will not work.

He spends his hours trifling,
He lacks the brains to learn
A thing that might assist him
His livelihood to earn.

In every branch of knowledge
He has such marked deficiency,
I guess we'll have to make him
An expert in efficiency.

Retired Farmers

By ELBERT HUBBARD

Of all the mental misery that comes to mortals I know nothing quite so tragic as that of the retired farmer—and the people who have to live with him.

Get enough retired farmers in a town and they will start a melancholia shop.

A prosperous farming community seems bound to produce a few of these malcontents. The very beauty and fertility of the soil makes it possible for a man to save up a little money, move to town and live a life of gossip and growl.

A farmer who farms is fine, but a retired farmer is fierce.

The town to avoid is the town made up of retired farmers.

In years agone I used to hear men say, "I intend to make my pile and retire from business and enjoy myself."

I am glad to know that anyone today who makes this remark is regarded as booked for the bughouse.

The man who does not enjoy himself in his business will never know what happiness is.

The limit of rest is very soon reached, and then misery follows fast.

Well did Iago wail: "My occupation! My occupation! My occupation's gone!"

When your occupation is gone you had better throw your cosmic grip-sack overboard and jump overboard after it.

Lack of occupation is not rest; a mind quite idle is a mind distressed.

We must arrange our work so as to get a little rest every day. But too much rest is almost as bad as too much food. The task of devoting the balance of your life to rest is a beckon for Charon's mudscow.

* * *

Retired farmers are a blot and a blight on the civic prospects of any town.

The farmer works hard until he is fifty, fifty-five or sixty. He has a few thousand dollars in the bank. The mortgage has been cleared off. He has an opportunity to rent his place, or his children will manage it for him. He buys a house in town, turns the farm over to the boys or to renters and looks forward to a long life of leisurely enjoyment.

His habit of life is to be up a five o'clock in the morning, feed horses, pigs, cattle and chickens, doing his chores, looking after a great number of details that have to have his personal attention.

Tired and worn with this multiplicity of things to look after he decides to throw up the whole job, and he does.

Now he can get up any time that he wishes. He can lie abed until noon. There are no chores, no responsibilities, no horses unfed, no cattle mooning for him to come and minister to them. His occupation is gone.

His soul becomes corroded with discontent.

He wanders around from the grocery to the postoffice, then to the blacksmith shop.

He stops and masticates the textiles. But the joy has gone out of life and his existence becomes one gradual, growing growl.

Luckily for the world such men do not last long. The man who lasts is the man who sticks to his job.

* * *

There is no business in the world so delightful as farming when you do not get too much of it. Leisure on the farm is a joy.

To walk out over the broad acres and watch the growing things, be they animal or vegetable, is always pleasing.

The overworked farmer thinks he wants a divorce, when all he needs is a vacation.

The city man looks longingly forward to the time when he can move to the "old farm" and make it his home.

The city man who buys a farm and moves to the country seldom makes a mistake.

But for the farmer to move to town in the hope of finding rest is an illusion, tragic and terrible, not only for the man himself but for his family, the farm and for the community.

In-Shoots

The slanderer is no respecter of persons.

If one cannot do both, it is better to hustle than to hope.

The reform bug seldom crawls under the hat of the man who is holding down a fat-salaried official job.

Alimony as a Form of Graft

Degradation for Any Woman to be Supported by Man She Does Not Love and Whose Companionship She Cannot Endure.

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company

CHARLES L. GUY of the New York Supreme Court has come forth with a protest against giving divorced wives large alimonies. It is time some strong voice was raised in protest against this reflection upon dignified womanhood.

This subject of alimony should have been taken up by the suffragettes long ago, and an anti-alimony organization should have been formed by them. When a woman separates from her husband it is usually because she has ceased to care for him, ceased to respect him and ceased to feel confidence in his honor. How any woman can permit a man of whom she entertains such an opinion to pay her money is a question for "the emancipated" to answer.

When such a husband has left a child to be supported it is reasonable and right that he should do his part toward the maintenance of that child; but the majority of women receiving alimony today seem to be childless women, and Judge Guy makes many pertinent comments regarding these women, as follows:

"In fixing permanent alimony it should be borne in mind that the husband, although guilty of grave misconduct, is still a human being. If he is to be made the producing machinery for the support of the woman who is no longer his wife and who gives nothing in return, he must not be assessed so heavily as to deprive him of all incentive to go on living and producing. He must be accorded the means not only to go on living, but to find some enjoyment and compensation in life.

If he has not this opportunity, if the burden placed upon him is too grievous to be borne, all the incentive to labor is gone. When alimony is excessive, it is likely to defeat its own object. It is better for the divorced wife to be granted moderate alimony which will be paid than excessive alimony which probably will be avoided.

"Any adult person who receives benefits from another without wishing and trying to return a full equivalent, is grafting, whether such a person be wife, child, husband, friend or stranger. Grafting is taking, without giving an honest equivalent. The women and grown children of our well-to-do middle class furnish rather conspicuous examples of this evil. It is not limited to a certain class of office-holders."

And, again, he says:

"While the divorced husband still retains his right to find some enjoyment in life, the woman who divorced him must not expect to go on enjoying all the benefits that go with a happy and successful married life. She no longer performs any reciprocal duty. There is no obligation resting upon the income of the man to whom she makes no return of any kind."

The wife who has been left an invalid through her husband's cruelty, or vices, should be paid alimony until such time as she is able to support herself; and she should pray and work for that hour of emancipation from a degrading dependence.

For it is an undeniable degradation for any woman to be supported by a man she does not love, and whose companionship she cannot endure.

There is so much talk these days of woman's expansion and development and growth, and such continual demand is made for an enlargement of her sphere of action, that the world is justified in a critical survey of her conduct.

All about us may be seen women who are living on the money of divorced husbands, while they exploit themselves in the society of other men. The woman who is compelled to accept the money of a divorced husband in order to keep from starvation, ought to feel her position one which demands the utmost dignity and circumspection.

Surely such things lower woman's status, and render her despicable in the eyes of the right thinking.

Let our suffragists take this matter up and elevate the ideals of womankind.
